

Last-minute REMINDERS

answer these questions:—they may save you a disappointment during the holidays.

1. Have you made an appointment with the hairdresser for December 29? Your hair is sure to need re-setting after Christmas.
2. Have you ordered in enough bacon, eggs, butter, coffee, tea, mustard, dog biscuits, cat's meat, fruit, potatoes, sugar, jam, to last you over four days?
3. Are you sure that you have in the house—and in working order—a tin-opener, cork-screw, beer-bottle opener, nutcrackers, knife-sharpener?
4. Is your medicine cupboard well stocked with aspirin, bicarbonate of soda, iodine, and sticking plaster?

5. Have you several pairs of stockings washed and mended ready to wear? You don't want to have to start darning as you are changing for the party.
6. Have you plenty of notepaper, ink, stamps, for writing thank-you letters?
7. Have you got enough money in the house—particularly small change—to carry you over the week-end and meet Christmas boxes?
8. Is the house well supplied with cigarettes and matches?
9. Are you arranging to send your XLT Christmas greetings overseas? They cost only one-third of the ordinary cable rates.
10. Have you got in some cooking brandy to set the Christmas pudding on fire? (Warm the brandy before you light it.)
11. Have you changed your library book for a new one which will last you over the week-end?
12. Are you fully supplied with face powder, cream, rouge, lipstick, setting lotion, scent, to help you look your best?
13. Have you one or two extra little presents in hand, in case an unexpected guest comes to the house?
14. Is the larder amply stocked with cold and tinned food? You never know when you will have to provide an extra meal.
15. Have you remembered to get in plenty of counters, string, spare packs of cards, George VI ten-cent coins, and balloons for party games?
16. Have you written down a rough plan for meals on Christmas Day, Boxing Day and Monday, so that you needn't worry about them during the holiday?

Christmas Horoscopes

Is It Your Birthday?

Friday, December 24.

THIS will be an extremely momentous year. Important changes will take place; far-reaching decisions have to be made.

You will have a certain amount of luck with money, and may increase earnings through the interest of an elder. Over-expenditure and bad judgment over financial affairs threaten to get you into temporary difficulties.

Children born to-day will be changeable and guided by the emotions. They will be versatile and possess considerable dramatic talent.

TO-DAY FOR ALL READERS.—A good day to effect changes. Move, alter plans, or change occupation. Ask favours from elders. Good for dealings with land or property.

Saturday, December 25.

THIS will be a year of strenuous activity.

Business affairs will take an important turn. Documents will be signed, agreements made. You may unexpectedly be called upon to undertake more responsible work, and should acquit yourself with distinction.

You will travel considerably, and may pay a long visit away from home. There is also the possibility of a move in residence.

A letter from a distance will bring some good news. Children born to-day will be bright, amusing, and versatile. They will be industrious, determined and learn easily.

TO-DAY FOR ALL READERS.—A good day. Entertain, pay visits. Excellent for travel, for writing, and general correspondence. Relax and be merry.

Sunday, December 26.

A CONFLICTING year is ahead of you.

You can make great strides in a career, either business or professional. You will be prominent in your social circle, and generally achieve much personal success.

Financial enterprises should succeed, but tend to become involved.

Love will be a dominating factor. Those who are now heart-whole are most unlikely to remain so, but will be swept off their feet in a love-at-first-sight romance.

Children born to-day will be intelligent, adaptable and impressive, but lacking in concentration and drive.

TO-DAY FOR ALL READERS.—Keep calm and be sensible. Squabble about nothing; unnecessary worry about the future, depression, and lowered vitality will be the reaction from yesterday's excitement.

Monday, December 27.

THIS will be a year of achievement, and you will realise many of your innermost hopes and ambitions. There is a strong probability of gain from a legacy.

Employees should achieve some promotion and will win influential support from important people. Don't let success go to your head, but think of the future and consolidate your position.

Children born to-day will be intelligent, quick of perception and movement. They will be enterprising, imaginative, and original.

TO-DAY FOR ALL READERS.—A day for action and decisive thinking. Tie up loose ends, clear up arrears of correspondence. Make plans for the future or visit friends.

Practical advice that will help you to Look your best for Christmas PARTIES

YOU will be going to lots of parties this Christmas. You have got your frocks planned and hanging ready in the cupboard. A billowy chiffon for dancing; a cocktail suit; a couple of tunics, one plain and one fluffy, to go with a slipper satin skirt for pantomime and cinema evenings, perhaps a new evening coat. But what about those details that are going to take you out of the just pretty class and make you really smart?

Here is news straight from Hollywood, Paris

How to Use Up The Turkey

By GLORIA

Turkey Scramble

CHOP turkey finely, and a little ham, add to the required number of beaten eggs, season well. Melt butter in saucepan, add egg mixture and stir until cooked.

Savoury Turkey Fritters

MIX some turkey, ham, sausage and stuffing. Mix with bread-crumbs, bind with an egg, dip in batter, and fry in deep fat until golden brown.

Turkey and Ham Pie

CUT up turkey and ham—not too finely—and put into a pie-dish with a few balls of stuffing. If you have any, make about 1½ pt. white sauce, pour over meat and leave to cool. Make pastry, cover pie, and bake about ½ hour.

Potted Turkey

MIX some turkey finely and pound in a mortar. To half a pound of turkey add 2oz. of melted butter, and season well. Rub the mixture through a sieve, press it into pots, and cover with clarified butter.

and Bond-street. Let's start from the feet and work upwards.

Shoes

Smartest evening shoes show lacquered the nails winking through strappings of plaited braid or kid. Choose this kind in preference to toeless sandals. Heels low. Colour should match your frock (unless you have exceptional feet beware of strong colour contrasts in your slippers). Sandals of plaited gold or silver braid are a useful choice as they can be worn with almost anything.

Gloves

Choose plain suede or kid. Fancy gauntlets are fun but need a lot of living up to. Bright colours with black frocks still fashionable, but must be really well cut and of finest suede.

Handbags

Portmanteau is the newest shape and, like that useful piece of luggage opens out square. Usually made of strong brocades. Party cases are much cheaper and in every colour and material. A new vanity case from America is not much bigger than a pocket comb case and contains rouge, powder and lipsticks. In pastel coloured enamels with jewelled clasp.

Handkerchiefs

Embroidery newer than initials. A square of chiffon, embroidered in gold or silver thread in a pattern of stars, crescents or tiny flowers, is a lovely idea for evening and easy to copy.

Make-up & Hair

From an evening make-up try to get an Oriental look; it suits brightly-patterned materials: the lacquered satins and brocades that are used for evening coats and tunics.

The new Hollywood evening make-up has a foundation cream of a delicate amber shade. An ordinary cream rouge can be worn with the make-up, but nasturtium is the shade recommended and it is becoming to every type. Two powders are used. First a light banana shade, then a dusting of amber. Lipstick: nasturtium with, of course, nail varnish to match.

Green or brown eyeshadow with or without a touch of gold or silver. Applied with duo care, this make-up will carry you through the most riotous Christmas partying without having to re-powder.

A bow of velvet tied like a true lover's knot (if such fantasies suit you) is newer than a posy of flowers for wearing in the hair. But if you are in doubt about wearing any kind of head-dress, follow fashion's surest leaders and don't.

Boy who Joked at Death

Scout Teaches Cripples To Laugh At Life LOST LEGS IN ACCIDENT

(By Andrew Kidd)

Leatherhead, Nov. 19.

Three years ago sea scout Jack Weller, then 15, was run down by a railway engine and both his legs were severed above the knee.

As he lay for weeks between life and death in a Salford hospital, not a whimper passed his lips. Instead, he smiled through his agony.

The story of his wonderful courage was told in the Sunday Chronicle at the time and aroused nation-wide admiration.

For days on end cheque after cheque came from sympathetic readers to the boy, who, wracked with pain, could tell his sorrowing father:—

"It's all right, Dad—I know my legs have gone. I saw what happened as they put me in the ambulance. . . . I shall have to tuck my stockings up now."

TO EARN HIS OWN LIVING SOON

Now hear the sequel. . . . On visiting the London and District Cripples' Training College at Leatherhead (Surrey) I found that Jack has been miraculously transformed.

"See my pair of artificial legs," he said. "I have learned to walk without difficulty. Soon I will be able to run as well."

"Since I came here and got fitted up with new legs I have been learning to be an electric arc-welder. Soon I will be able to go out into the world and earn my own living."

Captain John Vincent Hay, superintendent of the college, confirmed all Jack had said.

"Yes, in about two or three months Jack will be one of the world's wage-earners. He has been an example to all."

Jack is one of 52 crippled students for whom the college is working miracles. Captain Hay spoke of other wonderful cases.

There is Christopher Tracey, of Brighton, who had his back broken in a motor-cycle accident. He is now being trained as an engineer—and has turned out to be an inventor.

Surgeons have been astonished by a new type of surgical lamp which he made. It was shown last month at an international exhibition in Edinburgh.

HIS "GREAT SPIRIT"

Twenty-year-old James Briault, of Pinner, Middlesex, who is paralysed in both legs and is unable to walk a step, is training for clerical work. James has been proving his ability as secretary of the students' club.

"James has great spirit," said Captain Hay. "He is out to help himself as far as possible, and for years on end he has been saving up to buy a wheelchair. Already he has saved £10."

The Cripples' Training College, which trains incapacitated youths and men for industry, was established

SOVIET PLANS NEW FLEET FOR ARCTIC

Special submarines to travel under the Arctic icefields are apparently to play an important part in the establishment of Russia's Moscow-North American Transpolar passenger and freight air route, says the Moscow correspondent of the News-Chronicle.

For the first time, preliminary specifications for such under-ice craft have been published. According to these the vessels could:—

Be employed for the construction of aerodromes and landing fields across the vast deserts of the central Polar basin.

Travel thousands of miles without refueling.

Break through thick over-head icefields when necessary by the use of powerful explosives.

The final conquest of the Stalin Trans-Arctic route, it is declared, will be realised by a combination of submarines, aeroplanes, ice-breakers, and huge amphibian tanks.

The latter would be stationed 500 miles apart as fuel and rescue bases.

It is hinted that Russia may attempt to send a fleet of submarines into the Arctic before Sir Hubert Wilkins can carry out his own new project for an under-ice journey.

Planes Active Near Canton

Scout Towards Waichow

Canton, Dec. 23.

Several Japanese planes were sighted from Shamen this morning heading westward, and a few minutes later the thunder of bombs was faintly audible throughout Canton.

The Japanese planes returned in the afternoon and again dropped bombs west of Canton. It is believed at Samshui, an important commercial town, but there have been no details. The Canton-Kowloon Railway was also bombed during the morning activity, six bombs being dropped in the vicinity of kilometre 119 without much damage.

Details are not available regarding the Canton-Hankow Railway on which the "Christmas Express" is expected to arrive on Saturday.—Reuter.

EARLIER ATTACKS

Canton, Dec. 23.

On Tuesday afternoon eight shells were thrown onto the shore in the Blas Bay area and two scouting planes were catapulted into the air from Japanese warships. They went over the highway about midway between Waichow and Cheungmuktau. They followed the road down to Cheungmuktau presumably to find out whether troops were moving up towards the front. They dropped bombs at Kamkuishan.—Our Own Correspondent.

Knees swollen—neck stiff with pain—unable to get out of bed. That was the condition of this woman when she began to take Kruschen Salts. Now she writes this letter:—

"I have had rheumatism in the neck and knees for years, and was bedfast for several months. I could get no relief from anything I took. Then a friend of mine told me to try Kruschen Salts. I got a bottle, and that first bottle took the swelling out of my knees. Soon my neck too was free from pain. It is three months since I started taking Kruschen, and now I am up and doing my housework—which I could not do for six months. I would not be without Kruschen."—(Mrs.) F.S.

Kruschen Salts brings quick relief from the cutting, stabbing pains of rheumatism because it actually rids your blood of every trace of poisonous uric acid. Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts dull the sharp edges of these uric acid crystals, then dissolve them away altogether. Other ingredients of these Salts assist Nature to wash out these dissolved crystals through the natural channels.

MIRACLE OF SURGERY

TRANSFUSION OF OWN BLOOD SAVES WOMAN

Mme Magda de Fontange, who created a sensation by shooting the French Count de Chambrun whom she accused of breaking up her romance with Mussolini was refused admission into the United States by Immigration authorities when she tried to reach Hollywood. The only view she got of New York was when she gazed through a porthole of the Normandie.

AMAZING FIGHT WITH DEATH SUCCEEDS

London, Nov. 20.

Receiving three pints of her own blood by transfusion after her heart had stopped beating, a woman aged 34, the wife of a Civil Servant, has been saved by a remarkable operation performed at Croydon General Hospital.

Dr. C. J. C. Siggers, 31-year-old resident surgical officer, and his assistant, Dr. Eric Ashman, were the men in this life-and-death drama of the operating theatre.

To have delayed transfusion until the arrival of a blood donor would have been fatal. The human body contains about five pints of blood. This woman had already "lost" three pints when her heart stopped beating.

COLLAPSED

Suffering from internal hemorrhage following abnormal gestation, an urgent operation was essential. Hardly had the anæsthetic been administered than the patient collapsed. Ephedrine—a drug to raise the blood pressure—was administered as soon as the pulse failed.

An incision was made just below the ribs and Dr. Siggers began massaging the heart through the diaphragm.

The heart started beating again, and as soon as it was considered safe the task of blood transfusion was begun.

One pint of blood was taken from the incision, passed through a sterilised gauze and restored to the patient by the orthodox means—through a vein in the arm.

Two further pints which were drained into the abdomen were taken after a second incision, and transfused by the same means.

NEARLY BETTER

It was not until then that Dr. Siggers could proceed with the operation proper.

Transfusion with the patient's own blood is only rarely possible, writes the Medical Correspondent. Hemorrhage must be a large one into the abdominal cavity. There must be no germs present such as those from inflammation or from the bowel. The sufferer must be in the hands of a surgeon with full equipment for a major operation.

It is performed after serious injury to an organ like the liver or spleen, generally following accidents.

Operation reveals the grave condition, and there is no time to find a blood donor. As soon as the surgeon has stopped the hemorrhage the blood is filtered rapidly, treated to prevent clotting, and injected into a vein by his assistant while he finishes the operation. It has the same effect as an ordinary blood transfusion.

Rubber Suit For 'Iron Lung Man'

New York, Dec. 1.

Frederick B. Snite, millionaire's son, who has lived in an "iron lung" for two years, hopes in a few days to be transferred to a light-weight sponge-rubber "lung."

In this he will be able to move his arms, legs, and neck, which he has not done since he was stricken with infantile paralysis while in China on a world tour. He travelled in the "iron lung" half-way across the world to his home in Florida, has maintained a cheerful interest in everything around him, and has been visited regularly by the girl whom he hopes to marry.

Lately, however, his medical attendants noticed that he was becoming depressed because of his inability to move. They hope to see an improvement when he moves into his new "lung."

Montreal. The trade in ships for breaking-up has greatly increased at Vancouver lately. Hostilities in the Far East have given Japan an insatiable appetite for scrap metal, and much of the business is done through that port. The 17-year-old San Francisco steamer Fort Armstrong, 3,240 tons, owned by the Charles Nelson Co., recently loaded and cleared for Japan with a Japanese crew on board. The ship was bought by the Mitsui Co. She will be broken up. There are many cases similar to that of the Fort Armstrong. The ships are brought to Vancouver and loaded with supplies and cleared for arrival in Japan both cargoes and hulls are utilised with all speed. Social Credit Trial.—Mr. G. F. SEEKING A COOK

Aldershot, Nov. 29.

Mr. Hore-Belisha, Minister for War, presented medals to Army cooks at Aldershot to-day and explained why he has never married.

To the cooks he said: "I hope you will spread the love of cooking to your wives, if you have any."

"My own requirements in that respect are so exacting that I have never been able to find a wife who comes up to the necessary standard."

The best cook in the Army, Fusilier T. Garraway, of the 2nd Battalion Royal Fusiliers—his home is at South Tottenham—has cool hands. He is blond, twenty, and bashful. He prefers making meat pies, but he can bake a fancy tart as well.

Pastry cooks are born, not taught, they told me here, says a reporter. You must have a low blood heat in your fingers. The Army Cooking School with 100 students in various classes insists that its pastry be kept cold before it is baked. Warm hands make heavy pies they say.

You could not find a tin of bully beef in the Army to-day. Instead they give you tinned salmon done up with sauce and bits of treacery. They give you recipes for fifty kinds of pudding. "You use the same foundation," a sergeant cook said. "Put in currants if you want a currant pudding. Take out the fruit, add treacle—treacle pudding. Take out the treacle, add marmalade—golden pudding."

It goes on and on like that. Regular Army cooks had twenty-seven different puddings on display to-day.

There was an "In Town To-night" pudding, made with marmalade and with a flag flying from its crest. Those puddings were made by Peter Eaton, a boilerman. He cooks for his wife and two daughters on Sundays sometimes.

ROYALTY MUST RECEIVE NO PRIVILEGES

THE KING has made it known as his wish to members of the Royal Family that they should not ask or seek special traffic privileges except when they are performing official duties.

This includes car-parking. In future royal cars will be parked in the same way as others when visiting places of amusement or friends' homes in congested traffic areas. On October 14, says the Daily Express, one hundred taxi-drivers drove slowly in a "protest" procession from Leicester-square to Piccadilly-circus. They caused traffic hold-ups.

They alleged that when the Duchess of Kent dined with friends at the Cafe de Paris, her car was allowed to remain outside—though there is a garage nearby—while taxicabs were moved on. Since then taxicabs have parked, as usual outside the cafe.

REFERENDUM ON WAR

Mr. Louis Ludlow, member of the House of Representatives at Washington, is a Congressman who has never been prominent in the news outside his home state of Indiana until just recently. But not long ago he hit upon the not entirely original idea of submitting to referendum the most momentous decision that any Government can be called upon to make—the question of whether or not to go to war. And he has now become a figure of national importance, whose name is splashed in headlines all over the country and is known abroad as well. A controversy rages around the referendum scheme; for on the face of it there is much to commend it. Closer analysis shows its flaws, however.

It will probably be argued by its exponents, indeed this is their main point, that a democratic people has the right to show its desires when confronted with the possibility of having to make great sacrifices. Why, since a country is entitled to express its choice in respect to political candidates for the highest offices, when it even elects the judges of its courts, its state governors, as in America, should it not declare its will for or against war? It would seem logical that a free people should have that right. Indirectly, it has. It must be supposed the public is adequately represented in its Government and that these representatives know their business and serve their constituents well. It must be supposed that the people who are responsible for the foreign policy are also responsible to the state, and that they will not rush rashly into dangers through stupid or blundering diplomacy. For as long as a nation is a nation, it must have leaders, and it must trust them and follow whosoever they shall lead. Otherwise there will be anarchy and chaos, and peace, as an aim, is out of the question.

The idea of a referendum on war looks nice on paper, but put to the practical test, what will BLESSED are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted.

Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth.

Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled.

Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy.

Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.

Blessed are the peace-makers: for they shall be called the children of God.

Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for My sake.

Rejoice, and be exceedingly glad: for great is your reward in heaven: for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you.

YE are the salt of the earth: but if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted? It is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of men.

be found? That it is unwieldy and unworkable. Wars have a way of developing almost overnight. Some one sinks someone else's warship—as in the case which caused the Spanish-American war—and tension develops. The explanation is not satisfactory; satisfaction is not forthcoming after heated hours of recrimination; words are weighted with a new significance and tragic portent, and the time arrives when an ultimatum is delivered. Shall the nation vote then? How long would it take to count the ballot? Would it be a representative vote anyway? People would be inflamed with passion as a result of the insult suffered and the lives lost. Would they vote with wisdom and with a thorough knowledge of the facts as their statesmen, who are guiding them, possess? Not likely.

Another example. Japan and the United States are discussing a critical situation which has arisen out of the sinking of the Panay. Will the United States go to war? Take a referendum to-day. Suppose the vote was overwhelmingly affirmative, what would be the effect on relations between the two countries? It is not difficult to imagine. Suppose the result were strongly negative; what would be the effect upon Japan? And suppose tension grew greater to-morrow, and the next day, and there was another "incident" on the day following. Would the American people go to a referendum every day? Or would they get a little tired of shutting up shop and trotting to the polls, and pick up a gun and do something about it.

A Government can tell fairly accurately the temper of its people without recourse to referendum. If a Government is hard-driven by circumstances towards war, it will be found the people are moving close behind, due, in part, to the publicity given to developments. Generally speaking, the world is safer in the hands of its experienced statesmen and diplomats than in the uncertain grip of an excitable public.

THIS IS CHRISTIANITY

Do you remember it?

TO-MORROW IS THE DAY WE CELEBRATE AS THE ANNIVERSARY OF THE BIRTH OF CHRIST. IN HONGKONG AND ELSEWHERE THROUGHOUT THE WORLD THE CHURCH WILL BROADCAST AN APPEAL FOR A GREAT RELIGIOUS REVIVAL. HERE IS OUR LORD'S OWN STATEMENT OF THE PHILOSOPHY THAT CONQUERED THE WORLD

Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid.

Neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick: and it giveth light unto all that are in the house.

Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven....

YE have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not kill: and whosoever shall kill shall be in danger of the judgment.

But I say unto you, That whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause shall be in danger of the judgment: and whosoever shall say to his brother, Raca, shall be in danger of the council: but whosoever shall say, Thou fool, shall be in danger of hell fire.

Therefore if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath ought against thee; Leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift....

YE have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not commit adultery:

But I say unto you, That whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart.

And if thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell.

And if thy right hand offend thee, cut it off, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell.

It hath been said, Whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement:

But I say unto you, That whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery: and whosoever shall marry her that is divorced committeth adultery.

AGAIN, ye have heard that it hath been said by them of old time, Thou shalt not forswear thyself, but shalt perform unto the Lord thine oaths:

But I say unto you, Swear not at all; neither by heaven; for it is God's throne:

Nor by the earth; for it is his footstool: neither by Jerusalem; for it is the city of the great King.

Neither shalt thou swear by thy head, because thou canst not make one hair white or black.

But let your communication be, Yea, yea; Nay, nay: for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil.

Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth:

But I say unto you, That ye resist not evil: but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also.

And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain.

Give to him that asketh thee, and from him that would borrow of thee turn not thou away.

YE have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbour, and hate thine enemy.

But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you;

That ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the just, and on the unjust.

For if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? do not even the publicans the same?

And if ye salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others? do not even the publicans so?

Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect....

AND when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are: for they love to pray standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward.

But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly.

But when ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do: for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking.

Be not ye therefore like unto them: for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask Him.

After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name.

Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.

Give us this day our daily bread.

And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.

And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen.

For if ye forgive not men their trespasses neither will your heavenly Father forgive your trespasses....

LAY not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal:

But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal:

For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.

The light of the body is the eye: if therefore thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light.

But if thine eye be evil, thy whole body shall be full of darkness. If, therefore, the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness!

NO man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one and love the other; or else he will hold to the one and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon.

Therefore I say unto you, Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment?

Behold the fowls of the air: for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they?

CHINESE PAINTING

By
GREGORY

THE production of objects destined for the purpose of artistic embellishment is common to every age and to every people. Some nations like the French, the Italians and the Japanese have made more progress in this sphere of endeavour than others. But of all the peoples of the globe, the Chinese on account of their amazing versatility have earned the unique distinction of being consummate masters in every field of art. Even their first tiresome and groping efforts executed during the period of the Han dynasty (206 B. C.—A. D. 220) reveal in their primitive form and colouring the elements of a remarkable culture. As all lovers of art know, the characteristics of aesthetic appreciation amongst the Chinese manifest themselves in the employment of magnificent combinations of exquisite colours and wondrous skill of composition. These factors are perhaps best exhibited in their efforts of pictorial delineation; for as illustrators, the Chinese are peerless, and have rendered the world their eternal debtors on account of the decorative features of their art which may be truly said surpasses that of the West by its degree of unprecedented splendour.

The entire world is under lasting obligation to the Chinese people; for we are indebted to the Sons of Han for many of the amenities of our daily lives. The porcelain service, for instance, from which we partake our meals owes its inception to the inventive genius of some forgotten Celestial artisan; the paper upon which we write or draw is, too, the product of the scientific research of some "savant" of old Cathay; and lastly, but not least, the ink which is employed in depicting upon the white sheet those symbols which represent human thought is a discovery dating from China's long past. Thus when we stop to discuss the vast sphere of Chinese art, we are immediately confronted by the formidableness of the subject. A sense of humility, awe and reverence comes over us when we contemplate the glorious succession of great artists during all the epochs of China's vicissitudinous and kaleidoscopic history. The great eras of Chinese art and culture are of course those of the Tang and Sung dynasties. The former (A. D. 618-906) was renowned for the excellence of its literature; whilst the latter (A. D. 960-1279) was celebrated for the glories of its ceramics and painting. Indeed, to the Sung artists pictorial representation was a passion, and some of their work has been classed as amongst the greatest which the world has ever seen.

brated for the glories of its ceramics and painting. Indeed, to the Sung artists pictorial representation was a passion, and some of their work has been classed as amongst the greatest which the world has ever seen.

AMONGST the galaxy of matchless painters who graced the period of the Sung was Wan Naam-tin. In the consensus of critical opinion, he created "transcripts of scenery that for breadth, atmosphere and picturesque beauty can scarcely be surpassed, and the points in which he differs from modern European artists are counterpoised by the more essential elements of artistic excellence." So highly esteemed is his work that Chinese artists for the past seven centuries have taken him as the model par excellence and have endeavoured to emulate his marvellous style. To this day the majority of Chinese landscapes in water-colour are frankly based on the work of this great master.

THE artists of the Ming Dynasty (A.D. 1368-1644) excelled in portraiture, and we have outstanding examples of their polished technique. The delineation of the female face and figure was their especial forte, and those pictures which have survived the ravages of time are justly esteemed for their fragile delicacy of outline and judicious refinement of colouring. Painting during the time of the Ming period became elevated to the level of a polite accomplishment of the gentry, and Chinese albums record the names of many accomplished men and women whose work was acclaimed by the dilettanti of that day. During the time of the Sung and Ming, Chinese artists paid much attention to the representation of birds and animals. The paintings themselves whilst lacking in the perspective, which we of the West are wont to associate with pictures of this kind, are nevertheless so infused with vivid realism that it is doubtful if any other people have been more successful in imparting such vitality to the pictured object. There is, however, no such elaboration of detail as in the work of Western artists, as for instance, that of Edwin Landseer and Rosa Bonheur; for the Chinese master of the brush deemed the depicting of mere detail as of less consequence than the expression of the actual soul or spirit behind the idea of the artist.

THE Ts'ing or Manchu dynasty, whilst politically a tragic epoch, was in the sphere of art a truly great period in Chinese history; for the encouragement given to the cultivation of belletristic accomplishments by the great Emperors K'ang-hsi, Yung-cheng and Ch'ien-lung — themselves virtuosi of ability — was so great that it has been said that almost the whole of the litterati were more or less imbued with a desire to dabble in the art of painting. Much of the work of the latter reveals skill of a high order, and to this day, there may be found in the collections of Chinese connoisseurs many examples of painting which evoke the admiration and praise of the beholder. Some of these Ts'ing period paintings are unsigned and others bear merely the seal of the artist distinguished by the title of Kui-sz, or "retired scholar" — a modest appellation signifying that the hand which painted the picture did not seek to win the acclaim of the world.

The greatest exponent of the talent and ingenuity of the Ts'ing school of Chinese painting is represented by the master, K'ui Kwoo-ls'uen, a Cantonese artist who flourished during the early years of the last century. In his work are found the sublime concept of subject, the exquisite mastery of colouring, the consummate skill and the ecstatic poetic sense of typical Chinese genius. It may be mentioned here that the Chinese have never taken much interest in the style of Western art. Painting in oils whilst not unknown in China, has been more or less relegated to the works produced in the ateliers of lesser-known artists. The introduction of the methods of oil painting is attributed to the early Jesuit missionaries, although certain of the pupils of George Chinnery, the Irish artist who resided at Canton during the early thirties of the last century, were instrumental in popularising working in oils to a limited extent. Only one of Chinnery's pupils attained any eminence and this was the one whom foreigners called "Lamqua". This artist maintained a studio on the island of Honam across the river from Canton sometime during the years 1840-'47, and was reputed by European visitors to have attained a high degree of excellence in his portraits in oil. Indeed, those which the writer has seen reveal a superiority in technique, some of them, too, so closely resembling the work of Chinnery that if it were not for the fact of the artist's seal being attached to them, they would readily be mistaken for those of his master.

MODERN Chinese artists have ceaselessly striven to enter the seventh heaven of the ultimate in pictographic delineation as portrayed by the great masters of the past. Some of them have been peculiarly successful, and it may be said that many of their works in water-colour are comparable with the masterpieces of the great painters of previous epochs. One of those whose pictures are liable to impress posterity with their excellence is Ko K'ei-fung. This gentleman at the time of his passing in 1935 at the comparatively early age of fifty years had achieved by the excellence of his work an enviable reputation which extended throughout the Far East.

Some of his pupils have, like their master, obtained the commendation of Chinese virtuosi for the studied excellence and high standard of their productions. Amongst the most talented of these who have enjoyed the privilege of study under the guidance of such a famous master are that talented trio of Hongkong artists—Hsiung Pi-shang, Yao-shang and Pei-shang. These young ladies—the eldest of whom is but 24 years of age—have studied Chinese painting for more than ten years and have already won wide acclaim for their mastery of a difficult art. In their paintings, they portray a spirit of vitality that is refreshing, and the scope of their subjects recalls the glamour of the effulgent past. It is such artists, who whilst grateful for the cultural heritage of their country's age-old history are yet discerning enough to realise that the most priceless gift that China can bestow upon the appreciative nations of the West is the aesthetic conception of an art which is truly divine.

THE MORTAL STORM

By Phyllis Bottomo
(Faber and Faber, 7s. 6d.)

THIS novel is written to a thesis and ruined in the result. A pity, because I have never shared the view that "art" and "propaganda" cannot mix. Doubly a pity, because Miss Bottomo's thesis, being anti-Fascist, is one which I strongly approve.

But it is all cut too neatly to pattern—the German girl who loves a Communist and has Nazi brothers and a Jewish father; the shooting of the Communist by the girl's aristocratic lover while he is attempting to escape to Austria; the murder of the father, a world-famous scientist, in a concentration camp. Heaven—and Hitler—knows such things have happened. But the German heroine remains obstinately English. And the argument is academic. A noble attempt, but it's all too ladylike, too fictional. R. P.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

TRAVEL INTO FAIRY LAND

Have a heart-to-heart talk with yourself! Double exposure, accurately planned, will let you.

DO you remember the wonder tales you read when a child, the forbidden castles filled with ogres, the huge jinn of the Arabian Nights, the trolls that lived under bridges and the fairies that haunted mysterious woodlands?

You can use your camera to recreate those childhood memories. You can make giants walk through your pictures. You can hold yourself, or a tiny version of yourself, in the hollow of your own hand. You can pose in intimate conversation with the Irish "wee people," the elves and fairies and the cobbling lopechaun.

It's not hard. The method is to use our old friend, the double exposure—two shots on the same film. All that is necessary is accurate posing and careful control of the light. A black background is necessary or you can pose your subject before the door of a dark room.

Now, without winding the film, move the camera back several feet, so the subject appears small in the view finder. Let him stand, facing his former position, so that his feet appear right on the ink dot in the finder. Arrange the light so the feet are not too brightly illuminated. This will help eliminate evidence of slight errors in the position of the subject. Snap the shutter a second time and the final picture is made. When the picture is developed, presto!—there are the little man and the big one, facing each other on the same film.

You will probably make mistakes in placement on your first tries, because the view finder is small, but this is part of the fun of trying trick photography—and some of your errors may give a funnier picture than the one you carefully planned. It is well to remember that only the figures in these shots can be lighted—if surrounding objects show up, they will spoil the picture.

If your camera has an "open" direct view-finder, without glass, it is best not to try this sort of work. If, however, you have a camera with ground glass back, you can place figures with greater accuracy.

With this technique, you can make a fairy dance on the table in front of you—the fairy being your small daughter in her ballet dress. If you want to make the little figures transparent, shorten exposure a little. You can, if you like, do costume work, illustrating the fairy tales you enjoyed as a child. Try Jack and the Beanstalk, with an intrepid small boy eluding the grasp of a fierce ogre. Or get an old hiking brogan and a copy of Mother Goose and picture the Old Lady Who Lived in a Shoe.

DOES WAKING TIRED EVERY MORNING

ruin a Woman's Looks?

'YES,' says
well known doctor

That drawn, tired look, that dullness in your eyes, those tiredness lines will leave you when you get rid of Night Starvation

WAKING TIRED every morning is very often a sign of Night Starvation. It shows in your face in a dozen different ways. Even the colour of your skin changes. Shadows come in all the wrong places, making you look drawn and old. Night Starvation shows in your body, too. Shoulders droop—your whole figure sags. Your step lacks youthfulness and vitality.

No beauty treatment can hide the unattractive results of Night Starvation. You have to get rid of the cause. Do you know that you burn up energy even while you sleep? Breathing alone takes 20,000 muscular efforts during the night. Unless energy is replaced during sleep, of course you wake feeling and LOOKING tired—Night Starved, in fact.

What to do about it

Doctors say there is nothing so good as Horlicks to correct this condition. Start taking Horlicks, a hot cupful every night. You will wake feeling refreshed—sparkling eyes, fresh healthy skin. No drawn look. No shadows. Your face, your whole appearance, will have that vivacity and charm other women envy.

Robinson had been trapped by Irene Collier. (Was the plot her own or Playfair's?—that was never officially known.) At any rate, there had not, in fact, been any fire-draught. Robinson thus involved himself, as soon as he began to explain his movements, in a nexus of palpable lies.

DOCTOR DENIES LOVE AFFAIR

"Girl Threw Water At Me Broke Glass In Car"

LINCOLN LIBEL ACTION IN COURT

Lincoln, Nov. 19.
Dr. John Desmond O'Neill, of Skogness, at Lincoln denied that he had had intimate love affairs with a young woman accused of publishing a defamatory libel against him.

Muriel Tonge Wilkin, aged twenty-six, of Skogness, pleaded justification to the libel charge, and guilty to charges of assaulting the doctor and damaging his car.

Dressed in a costume of bold cheek and a yellow polo jumper, she rarely raised her head as Dr. O'Neill, honorary medical officer of Skogness District Hospital, said she had—

Emptied a jug of water over his head;
Thrown empty beer bottles at him;

Smashed windscreen and windows of his car;

Hurled large stones at him.

Dr. O'Neill said these incidents took place on August 19 after he had refused to give Miss Wilkin's mother any more morphine. Miss Wilkin had been "slighted" on August 23 he received a letter from Miss Wilkin—

"Darling, you must keep your promise and marry me. I did not want you in trouble with the B.M.A. Don't make me desperate. Come and see me."

Later he received two postcards. One said: "Killer." Both were signed "Muriel."

On August 28 an advertisement appeared in a local paper announcing his engagement to Miss Wilkin. He immediately issued a disclaimer.

DENIES KISSES

Cross-examined by Mr. Walker, Carter, for the defence, Dr. O'Neill denied meeting Miss Wilkin, taking her in his car, going for walks with her or kissing her.

He also denied saying that if he married he would lose some money, or asking her to keep it secret and to wait for him.

Did she go up to your sitting-room, did you come up and find her kneeling on the rug in front of the fire, and did intimacy then take place?

—No.
Questioned about a visit to Mrs. Wilkin's house on July 17, he denied that he went to "a small bedroom" with Miss Wilkin and that he took off his shoes so that her mother would not hear him.

During the excitement on August 19, the doctor added, Mrs. Wilkin accused him of giving her morphine in order to take advantage of her daughter.

In his opinion Miss Wilkin's mind was unstable, and her story was an "utter tissue of lies from start to finish."

New P. & O. Skipper Sailed In Windjammers

Captain H. Elliott-Smith, who is well-known in Singapore, has retired from the P. & O. after 38 years in the company's service.

His place as Commander of the Chitral has been taken by Captain W. E. L. S. Pocock who thus takes up his first permanent appointment to a passenger ship.

Captain Pocock went to sea in September, 1895, serving his apprenticeship in the Star of Italy, a sailing ship. Incidentally, he is one of the few liner commanders who hold an extra master ticket for square-rigged ships.

He joined the P. & O. as 4th Officer of the Aroata and served in a number of ships.

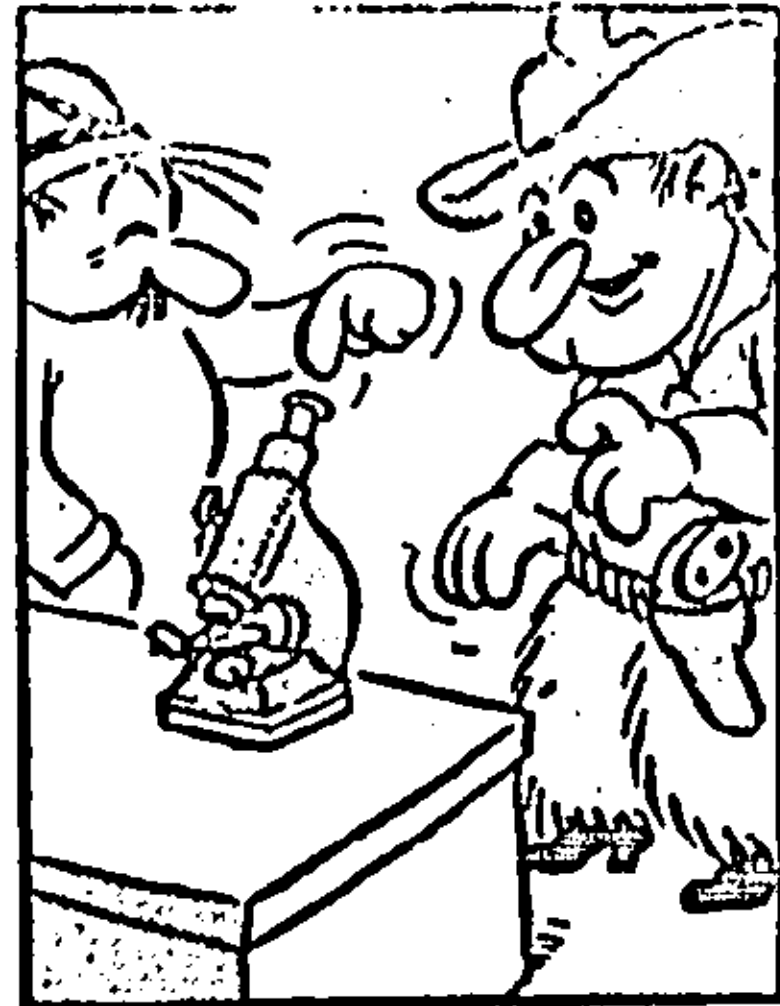

During the war he remained in the P. & O. service and was in the Maloja as 2nd Officer when, in 1916 she was mined in the Channel with the loss of 122 lives.

During the post-war years, Captain Pocock had a varied experience with all types of ships and when the new vessel Viceroy of India was ready he was appointed as her Chief Officer.

His first command was the Mirzapore, a cargo vessel employed in the P. & O. Bombay-Far East service. On returning to England he made voyages temporarily in command of the Raschel and Corbridge.

Eating Has Become A Lost Art

Our Wives Don't Know Their Jobs

We do not appreciate food as we used to do. We are losing our love of a good meal. The noble art of eating is going to the dogs.

EXPERIENCED restaurant-keepers, waiters, chefs and maitres d'hôtel have known about it for some time. Now Mr. W. S. Morrison, Minister of Agriculture, adds his voice to the mournful plaint.

Speaking at the Hotels and Restaurants' Association Conference at Cheltenham recently he said:

"I think it is because there are more pleasures to-day competing with the pleasure of good food. It is probable that the cinema, as much as anything else, has made the portly and dignified Mrs. Beeton shrink to the meagre form of the can-opener."

SOME REASONS

The cognoscenti in London's temples of food, consulted had a good deal to say on the subject.

All spoke wistfully of the days before the war when you could get people to notice what was on their plates.

On the decline in appreciation of food they were unanimous. On the reasons for it they differed. There might be something in Mr. Morrison's too-many-other-attractions theory, but there were other reasons, too.

Such as these:
"Wives.—They don't know their job as they used to. They don't take trouble over meals at home. No variety, no enterprise in their cooking, no enthusiasm for it. So they, and those they are cooking for, get into the rut and take what they're given and lose interest in the subject of food."

Time.—Everything is rushed. Got to get lunch over quickly because of an appointment, got to get through dinner by eight o'clock because the show will be starting. The mere thought that you haven't much time spoils your appreciation of food."

"Fear.—Men don't eat because of indigestion. Nearly every man nowadays has or fears indigestion. Probably brought on by bad cooking and by worrying. Women don't eat because they're afraid of getting fat."

"Talk.—People want to talk (or, worse still, read) as they eat. All wrong: eating demands all your attention."

Good food is as cheap as bad food, said one of Soho's specialists. The thing is to be willing to take the trouble to buy it right and cook it right.

Cannibals Adopt Briton As Son

Dr. Donald Thomson, brilliant young British anthropologist and explorer, has solved a puzzle that for 13 years has intrigued the world—he has found a mystery English-speaking woman whom legend described as leader of a nomad killer-aborigine tribe in the Australian bush, writes Sean Fielding.

ENGAGED?

Tyrone Power and Janet Gaynor photographed recently in New York, where they were doing "the rounds". Their attachment has given rise to rumours of impending nuptials.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

CHRISTMAS TELEGRAMS

To The Editor, Hongkong Telegraph.

Sir,—From circulars from the Cable Companies I notice that Christmas and New Year telegrams can be sent (X.L.T.) to Great Britain at the reduced rate of $3.95 for 10 words while the rate to other places in Europe, with certain exceptions, is $12.17.

Can you please tell me the reason for this discrimination, especially as there is a Continental Cable Company working from this end.

A CONTINENTAL.

BRITISH CO-OPERATION

"Foreign countries, which control their own cable services, unfortunately would not co-operate with us in effecting drastic reductions to cable tolls for Christmas greeting messages," said an official of the Eastern Extension Cable Company this morning, when complaints regarding the disparity between charges to the British Empire and to other countries was brought to his notice.

"The cheap XLT rate from Hongkong to other parts of the Empire was brought about through the co-operation of the Home and Dominion Governments. It represents one of the biggest reductions ever made in cable tolls—in effect the XLT rate is approximately one-tenth of the ordinary rate."

"No such reduction could be obtained for XLT messages to foreign nations, because their Governments would not co-operate with us to such an extent. However, we were able to obtain some concession with all but one or two countries and, with these exceptions, Hongkong residents are able to cable to the Continent and elsewhere throughout the world at one-third the ordinary rate."

It was believed that the woman, sole survivor of the ill-fated Commonwealth survey ship, Douglas Mawson, lived somewhere in grim, uncharted Arnhem Land on the north-east coast of northern territory.

The Douglas Mawson had aboard an English woman and her 11-year-old daughter. When the ship foundered in Caledon Bay, Arnhem Land, in 1923, mother and daughter were held to have got ashore. The mother, it was stated, was murdered, but the daughter allowed to live.

AN AMAZON
Peculiar tales of a woman who spoke English and who was a leader of the spearmen on the coast.

Dr. Thomson has found that woman after a 15-month solitary track in Arnhem Land. She does speak English fluently; she was blamed for most of the trouble of the coast. But she is not English. She is called Clara, and of her Dr. Thomson says:

"She showed extraordinary courage and intelligence. She was abducted from her own tribe and brought to Caledon Bay, where she has been ever since."

That is all that is known of her.

ADOPTED BY TRIBE
Dr. Thomson is shortly sailing for England to see his parents, who live at Finchley, N. He went to Arnhem Land alone and unarmed, except for a shotgun to provide food, as special patrol officer for the Commonwealth Government.

He is the only white man to have penetrated Arnhem Land. The natives, killers and hunters of intruders, made him their blood brother, showed him the secret quarry where they still chip flints for spearheads, allowed him to photograph sacred ceremonies.

He was adopted as a "son" of Old Man Wonggo, a native officially regarded by the Commonwealth Government as the worst of Arnhem Land's "bad-men" and killers.

I saw Dr. Thomson's father at his Finchley home. He said to me: "There had been a number of killings at Caledon Bay. Donald offered to go there to see if he could pacify the natives and learn something of their country and habits."

"Donald approached Caledon Bay from the hinterland, and by persuasion convinced Old Man Wonggo that he meant no harm."

"Old Man Wonggo kept his position as leader through his fighting ability and that of his many warrior sons. But he became Donald's best friend. Through the centuries-old 'grape vine telegraph' Old Man Wonggo sent word to all tribes that his son was to receive help and friendship."

"Donald walked and canoed about 1,500 miles during his trek. Some of the tribes he met became tree dwellers in the wet seasons; some of them were very dangerous."

"He learned the language and had no trouble with any of them. In fact, the only trouble he did have was with the food. He found it quite edible, but it affected his teeth and digestion. At times he was forced to eat snakes."

Dr. Thomson is married and has two children, boy twins. He won the Harbinger-McIntosh scholarship at the University of Melbourne for the "best work on the sociology of the Australian aborigine ever written." He is to continue his anthropological research studies at Cambridge University under the Rockefeller Foundation.

MOST GOLFERS CHEAT!

By
F. J. C. PIGNON

LAWS, rules, instructions, decisions: these, it seems, are becoming the most important things in sport to-day.

So much so that players can be excused for saying to themselves "How far can I go without actually cheating?" and even the most punctilious will take advantage of any rule which permits him to escape punishment for his own mistakes. If that same player were to be accused of cheating he would be most offended, yet the complication of rules makes unwilling cheats of us all.

You may think you know the rules, but how can you when even those who make them scarcely know how to define them clearly?

WITHOUT doubt, the most complicated rules in all sport are those governing golf. I am convinced that not one golfer in a hundred really knows the rules of golf. How can he when there is the following formidable list? Twenty-three definitions. Thirty-five rules for match play (some with many sub-sections). Sixteen rules for stroke play. Special rules for stroke play four-somes, bogey competitions, best ball and four-ball matches, as well as Local rules, a barrage of restrictions called the "Etiquette of golf," and definitions of what is legal and illegal in the form and make of clubs and balls.

These, although covered in about twelve thousand words are apparently inadequate, since the Rules of Golf Committee has found it necessary to publish two ample volumes of

"Decisions" on the rules to elucidate complications which still arise.

Yet it was all very simple when there were only thirteen rules of golf—the original code—embraced in 300 words.

To-day, in almost every golf tournament there arises some question about the rules to be settled.

Take the cases of two professionals of high esteem who were disqualified after returning winning scores in tournaments only this week. There is no suggestion that they cheated, but they simply did not know enough about the rules.

These are the facts in brief. The ball was "lost," and while the caddies were searching for it the competitor returned to the place from where the ball was struck to play another shot so as to save time.

In the meantime the first ball was found, and the player therefore continued to hole out with it. That may seem reasonable enough, since a player is permitted to play a provisional ball when the first is likely to be lost; but the provisional ball must be played before the competitor goes forward to seek the first.

Moreover, the "Definitions" and not the Rules state that if a "lost" ball be subsequently found it may not be played. So, according to this confusing code, a ball that is found remains lost.

TECHNICALLY, the ball is "lost" or "abandoned" immediately the player goes back to play another, even though he has not expended the five minutes he is allowed for searching for the ball. And here's another puzzle! How ridiculous it seems that there should be a rule of golf that disqualifies a player for holing out with his own ball, yet such rule exists. And there are even worse examples of what seems to be grave injustice.

What would you think, for instance, if, having holed out in one, you were compelled by the rules to mark down a five on your card?

This actually happened during a competition at Helgato Heath. A player holed out in one at a short hole at which he could not see where the ball finished.

On coming to the green the ball could not be found so the competitor went back to play another from the tee, adding the penalty for lost ball and eventually holing out in five.

It was not until he holed the second ball, however, that the first was discovered in the hole.

What was to be done? The club committee was uncertain, so referred the matter to the Rules of Golf Committee, who decided that the player holed out in five and not in one, because the first ball was "lost."

WHAT obstructions is it possible to move? Is it possible to move the ball from certain bad lies? May the club be grounded...? These and a hundred and one other questions are raised by players, not with any endeavour to cheat but so as to gain full advantage of the rules.

There are about 1,000,000 golfers in Britain. All of them wish to play honestly and fairly, but not one-tenth of them can fully understand the present code.

For their peace of mind, let the Rules of Golf Committee, which is being reconstituted, give a lead in the sporting world by simplifying the rules.

The Story Behind China's Heroism

It is always rash to prophesy; but for once I will take the risk. This is the most exciting, rare, timely and important book published this year; and it will probably remain so for a long time to come.

Edgar Snow has done what no other living man has ever done; he has raised the curtain on one of the last great mysteries of the modern world; and has answered every question that the inquiring mind had ever wanted to know about it.

And a great many more as well.

Here, in three dimensions, is Soviet China; here for the first time are its leaders, in particular Mao Tse-tung, its Stalin; here is the way of its peoples' life, their enthusiasms, their fortitude, their integrity and, above all, their bravery.

It is an epic story. Five times Chiang Kai-shek hurled his Prussian trained armies against the Reds, five times he announced their annihilation to the world; five times he lied.

All the might of Nanking, blessed by the Great Powers of the world, never smashed an army that began with 200 captured rifles; grew to 180,000 trained men; was decimated; marched over 3,000 miles to preserve its independence; was hailed as deliverer wherever it went; and had an average individual age of about 20.

Few of the epic marches of history can compare with that migration of a whole people from Kiangsi, in the south, by way of Kweichow, and Yunnan to Shensi, in the north, where the Red capital now is.

It is a tale of perpetual wonder. Its high light was the crossing of the River Tatu in the face of enemy machine-guns. Picture it. Swung above a gorge, 100 yards wide, with the river crashing over rocks far below, is a chain bridge built centuries ago. Its floor boarding had been destroyed; only chains remained, across which, if they would reach the other side men had to swing like monkeys.

They had to cross; upon the success of that manoeuvre depended perhaps the fate of Soviet China. So men, in the face of those machine-guns, swung out over the river. Many of the first volunteers never got across, but dropped, one by one, into the river. In the end, however, intrepidly won; the enemy picked up its skirts and ran.

That episode is a symbol of the incredible difficulties which Soviet China has had to face—and conquer. It has conquered; it has changed the history of China and perhaps, of the human race.

But what, above all, shines from this book is a bravery that may have been matched in this world, but has certainly never been exceeded.

PHILIP JORDAN.

MOSCOW BAN ON VODKA

TOO MUCH DRINKING BY YOUNG PERSONS

Moscow. More than 50 bars near Moscow's university buildings and secondary schools have been closed by a decree which is aimed at stopping drinking by young people.

The sale of alcohol has been prohibited in a factory dining-rooms and on factory premises. It has also been banned in 34 foodshops, 29 restaurants and cafes—mostly along the main streets—and in 10 market tea rooms for peasants.

Vodka and other alcoholic drinks are to be sold in future only by the bottle and not by the glass. Leningrad gave Moscow the lead in these measures against the growing drunkenness and rowdiness.

2,700 MILES CYCLE RIDE

Sydney. The Australian road cyclist, Hubert Opperman, who has established many records in Britain and France, is expected here from Fremantle, Western Australia, on Thursday. To-night he reached Melbourne.

Opperman has already covered 2,100 miles in 11 days, 6 hours, 55 minutes, and is nearly four days ahead of the existing record held by W. Reed, of Perth. The total distance he will cover is approximately 2,700 miles.

TALL AND LIGHT SCORING

Notable Individual Feats
Mark Recent Matches
HOLIDAY FIXTURES

(By R. Abbit)

On Saturday last on the Police Club ground there was an exciting fixture between the Police and the present leaders of the Junior League, the Navy second. Like so many matches this season it ended in a draw and yet only 213 runs were scored! It was actually a game of individual performances.

The Police score of 131 (for seven wickets declared) was due almost entirely to W. L. Clark's 75 and T. R. Hunter's 32. After four batsmen had failed they came together and put on 100 for the fifth wicket. Curiously enough, both were run out. The Navy bowling was weak as of the six men tried, only Jeffery (three for 41) and Woods (two for 20) had any success. The Navy, who, I happen to know, had several vicissitudes caused by people falling out on Saturday morning, had a very narrow escape. Flynn as usual was making runs when he was run out with his score at 24. Vickerstaff made 23 and Cox 13 and that was about all. The last wicket fell to a bowler named G. Pope (4 for 20) and Carey (3 for 31) bowled very well.

AMAZINGLY LOW SCORES

At the Club de Recreo two eleven men only managed to total 114 runs between them and as E. M. L. Soares made 30 of them, the scores of the rest can be imagined. They were almost too small to see. For the University K. L. Mr took 7 for 30 while for the other side L. G. Gosno had six for 15, a good performance, but the opposition was not very serious. However, the game is the thing after all and there is often more thrill in a close fought game of small scores than in a draw with fat totals on each side.

BUT SOME BIG ONES

There were two non-league games in the First Division which produced quite a lot of runs. The Civil Service justified their improved reputation by knocking up 199 for 8 wickets. Richardson had one of his days and got a nice 60 but the most encouraging thing—coming from the Civil Service—point-of-view—was Baker's 61 not out. He has for years been suspected of being a batsman but has very seldom come off! This year, however, he has made several scores of over fifty and he is to be congratulated on his true form. As a fast scoring but he will be particularly useful on Saturday afternoon.

The I.R.C., however, were in no way discouraged and proceeded to put up 161 for 5 wickets. Their first four batsmen, Jemima A. R. Abbas, A. H. and M. P. Madar scoring 114 between them. In view of a lot of the other scores it is refreshing to see 350 runs made in a half day match! Even the Club-Navy match, with Alex Pearce's brilliant 151, only showed 10 more runs.

K.C.C.'S REVENGE

The Kowloon first eleven avenged their beating of six or seven weeks ago at the Valley by beating C.C.C. fairly comfortably though the home side were by no means disgraced. It was rather a match of individual performances and I suspect that this is the weakness of both teams. They rely too much on particular players to bring off a big performance rather than in a good balanced team. For instance F. K. Lee and Ernie Zimmerman scored 101 runs between them. The rest including Extras only got 44 of which G. Souza had 18 to his credit. As regards the Kowloon score, (103 for 8 wickets) after T. Madar was out early, Donald Anderson and Ernie Fincher had a big partnership and got 55 and 72 respectively. The rest I fancy had to bustle for runs—and anyway the team was not at full strength. I can't help thinking K.C.C. would do better if they gave T. Madar a try at number eight or nine for a bit. He has got runs, but at present he seems too uncertain a starter to bat as early as he does.

SUNDAY GAME WITH SEAFORTHS

Anderson was again in form on Sunday when he scored 103 retired against the Seaforths. Baxter had 33 and O'Brien, who failed on Saturday, 75 not out. A total of 250 for three was uncommonly good. The Seaforths got 159, and during the course of the innings every member of the K.C.C. side, except Dand being the sticks, had a bowl. It sounds like a very good Sunday.

The K.C.C. second eleven had a friendly against Craigengower and though they won by 30 runs they were not convincing. As usual McKenzie carried most of the weight, as he took 7 for 33—a really good performance—and made 15 not out. Broadbridge (40) alone did very much else. Baxter was not playing. Facing a total of 135 Craigengower found McKenzie too much for them. W. Hong Sing (25), A. M. Omar (10) and J. W. Leonard (32) run out alone did anything and K.C.C. got home by thirty runs.

There is no doubt that the Army

Giant-boxer, Primo Carnera, who recently made a rather miserable attempt to "come-back" in the world of pugilism. It is not believed he will ever attain his former eminent position in the heavyweight division of fighters.

Canada's Athletes Off To British Empire Games

Victoria, B.C. Dec. 23.

Seventy-eight Canadian athletes sailed for Australia to-day to attend the British Empire Athletic meeting at Sydney during the celebrations of New South Wales 150th anniversary.—Reuter.

A side is by far the best of the two entered in the Junior Division. They have Hatfield who is probably one of the most consistent bowlers in the Division. I was not able to see the game on Saturday last and I suspect the score sheet as printed does not reveal quite a true state of affairs. Army A batted first and the earlier batsmen in the arranged order did little save Sgt. Baker (23) and Sgt. Bloomfield (27). I read that Northcott (this is the third spelling of his name I have seen) and Chilton added 65 for the seventh wicket. Either it was for the ninth wicket or the order of going in was not correctly printed. Anyway it is certain the fall of the side wagged stoutly to take the score to 173, which was possibly a bit high unless runs came quickly at the end. As it was they did not have time to get the Club out, Wooding and Bond holding the last wicket up when the Club were still forty behind. The Club innings was very uneven—Jack Armstrong got 40; Patterson, Blake, Bishop and Mitchell double figures—but there were three ducks and a two (Continued on Page 13.)

SOME EXCITING FINISHES

Three Dead-Heats

We had innumerable exciting finishes, there being three dead-heats, two of which were handicap events framed by Mr. C. M. Alves. I have taken the trouble to segregate the margin of defeats with the following results:

Dead Heat	3
Short Head	18
A Head	13
A Neck	17
Half-a-length	15
Three-quarters of a length	2
A Length	26
1½ Lengths	28
Two Lengths	40
2½ Lengths	4
Three Lengths	28
Four Lengths	13
Five Lengths	4
Six Lengths	2
Many Lengths	7
220 races

It will be seen from the above that 122 races representing 53.00% were won from the beating of 1½ lengths and under, and the balance (46.02%) was from two lengths upwards. The

WHAT STAKES WERE WON

King's Warden Does Well

Among the old China ponies, Mr. Pearce's King's Warden has won altogether $7,723 in stakes and then comes Mrs. Dunbar's Bear Claw collecting a total sum of $4,800. Wild Life is third on the list with $4,208 while Gladiator has earned $3,750. All these four steeds are "A" class ponies, but Night View, a "C" class pacer, has piled up $3,250 and this is certainly not a bad record. Diana Bay was not seen out during the second half but she has made $2,000 to provide her own upkeep while The Tiger, owned by Messrs. Tester and Abraham, is now a pensioner. It may interest punters to know that the old China ponies have cost the Jockey Club over $90,000 in stake money and the following list will no doubt reveal some interesting figures:

Rose-Queen, Valorous and Ythan hold the distinction of weighing out for 17 events, but last year King's Justice appeared in public 10 times.

beating of two lengths was a common vogue, for there were 46 decisions under this category representing 20% odd.

Sixty-five jockeys weighed during the season but, many of them had one or two rides only. After the Annual Carnival, Mr. L. Frost, who had Mr. and Mrs. L. Dunbar's long string of good animals at his disposal, was not seen in the saddle, being transferred to Canton, but Mr. D. Black reaped the benefit of the "Days" stable. The latter's best riding display was at the Whitson meeting when he piloted seven winners to victory, but Mr. Black did not enjoy much luck after the resumption, for he rode only seven winners against his 17 during the first half racing season.

It is interesting to relate that no jockey scored a "hat trick" during the year under review, but of the red leaders jockeys, Messrs. I. C. Harris, W. Poy and S. W. Tang graduated with honours and Mr. S. L. Yuen, a promising young rider, requires one more win to join the black letters union. Mr. B. L. Tao made his debut as a jockey at the end of September and he has done remarkably well with nine wins, eight seconds and four thirds while Mr. K. S. Shu, another importation from Tientsin, has only one winning mount.

SPLENDID OUTLOOK FOR 1938

(By "Capt. Foster")

Favoured with glorious sunshine, the Hongkong Jockey Club brought a successful season to a close last Saturday at the Happy Valley, but, the main feature of the Thirteenth Extra Race Meeting was the favourites day, except in the last event when Firefly romped home first to hand out $129.20 to the delight of 147 smart calculators of the training times.

We shall have no more flat racing until February 1, but judging by the increase of subscribers for Australian and China ponies, it looks very much as though next year we shall have another season of high standard racing with plenty of thrills and exciting finishes. It may also interest regular followers of the turf to know that the number of Derby entries for 1938 is greater than the last few years, Sir Victor Sassoon heading the list with an array of over a dozen lovely animals. It cannot be said at this juncture whether all of them will come under the starter's orders, but certainly Sir Victor Sassoon is determined to capture another Blue Riband, which would be his fourth successive win in the Hongkong Derby.

However, it may be safely said that some very successful racing has been enjoyed, and a vote of thanks is deserving to the Stewards and Officials for discharging their duties as regular followers of the public.

There were actually, with the inclusion of the Annual Carnival, 21 days of racing and all the events were well contested. Mr. Clerk of the Weather was very kind to the racing fraternity, the meetings (with the exception of the Sixth Extra) being held under ideal conditions and the going on all occasions was on the fast side. There was undoubtedly marked improvement in the attendance, especially after the recess, and the crowd in the Public Enclosure has eclipsed all previous records for extra meetings. This could be easily gauged by the result of the Final Handicap run last Saturday when the driver of Firefly received a first prize of $4,000 for an outlay of $2.

Gordito Satisfies His Owners

As was predicted, Gordito piloted by Mr. S. C. Liang, no clerk of the annexing the Hongkong Autumn Sub-trifling Champions, but to ensure the success, the jockey took the dun gelding out at the release of the barrier, adopting the same tactics as when he captured the St. Leger. The pony was as he liked by many lengths. Messrs. R. Lasain and E. Souza should be proud of their animal, for Gordito has given the joint owners seven wins and a couple of seconds and thirds. It was unplaced on one occasion through disqualification for bumping and it is interesting to relate that the pony has earned $6,222 including the Sports Club Cup and the Coronation Cup.

RUMOURS DENIED

Planes Kill Nine
At Toishan

The Canton Gazette reports that the rumours concerning the arrival in Blas Bay of two Japanese transports have been denied by the Canton Chungshan Jih Pao, which says that the actual fact was that "two small Japanese warships have been found patrolling 40 miles off the coast."

The same journal brands as untrue the current report that foreign nationals in Canton have been notified to evacuate within a week.

Attack near Toishan

Canton, Dec. 22.
Since Monday's reported battle at Blas Bay, the six Japanese warships have not shifted their positions. At night they had their searchlights on, flooding the shore. All guns have been silent.

Opposite Hoiwang are stationed a Japanese cruiser and a destroyer. They also keep their searchlights moving at night, throwing the bright rays towards where they know the Chinese have their entrenchments.

Once again the Japanese tried to get ashore on Hsiachun Island on Tuesday morning. With the support of two river gunboats, 300 marines approached the island near the market place known as Lingmei. For two hours the irregular units, policemen, and homeguardsmen, manning machine-guns and small field pieces kept firing and the boats could not get very close to the shore at any time.

Two planes had preceded the boats, dropping six bombs, and then going to the mainland, dropping a heavy load of bombs at Toishan City. They landed in the streets and the wounded dead number nine. The wounded about 20. Some 14 buildings were completely wrecked, and damage done to a number more. The Toishan Y.M.C.A. sustained slight damage, this bomb killing four policemen.

Three Japanese warships, that had been standing guard at Chulimin, the next county to Luichow, in southwestern Kwangtung, moved over to the adjoining county of Shuihai. A very small and unnamed island belonging to the Shuihai District was attacked by three ships the same day. After throwing several shells promiscuously about, drawing no reply, they ceased firing, and later in the day returned to Chulimin. Our Own Correspondent.

Former S'hai Judge Dead

London, Dec. 23.
The death has occurred at Reigate of Mr. Gilbert Walter King, former Judge of the Supreme Court, Shanghai. Mr. King, who was 66, began his career as assistant clerk in the Supreme Court at Shanghai in 1903 and rose to Registrar. After a period at the Foreign Office, he was called to the Bar in 1910 and was again in Shanghai as assistant Judge and acting Judge until 1931 when he retired. He held the rare distinction of being both a solicitor and a barrister. In 1925 he was awarded the O.B.E.

What Is Your Face Value?

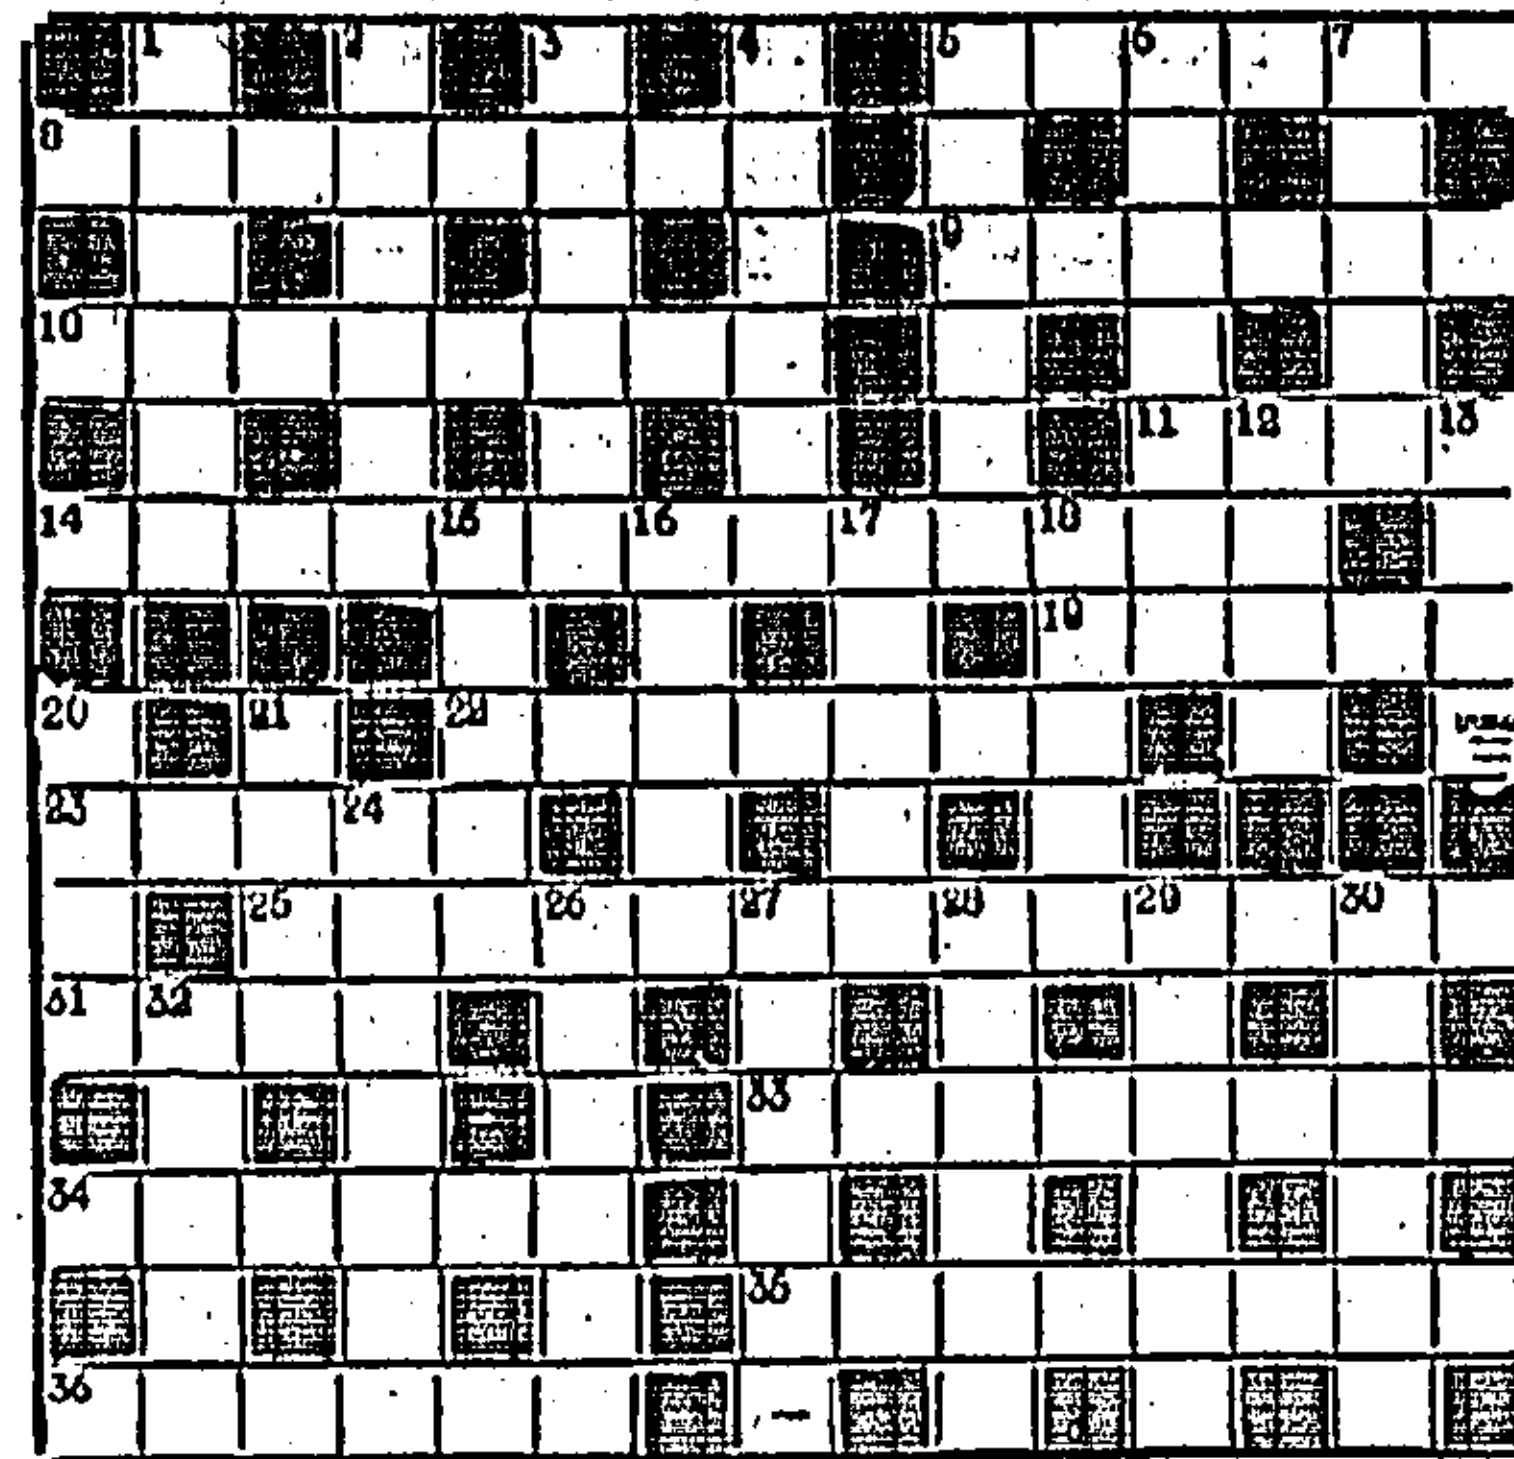

The first impression you make on people is through your general appearance. If you are easy to look at, your 'face value' is increased immediately. But if your complexion is muddy and pimply, your eye dull, your expression unhappy, the estimate of you is lowered.

Skin blemishes are usually caused by constipation and liver sluggishness. If you wish to have a clear skin, bright eyes, pure breath, a cheery, confidence-inspiring personality, you should keep your digestive system clean and active by an occasional dose of Pinkettes.

This splendid laxative not only makes you look better but makes you feel better in every way. You'll be surprised what a difference Pinkettes make. Try them and see. Of all chemists.

JAPANESE GAINS IN HANGCHOW DRIVE

FLANKING BLOW SUCCESSFUL, LICHU CAPTURED

Chinese Defenders Now Admit Difficulties

Shanghai, Dec. 24. Adopting again their favourite and highly successful out-flanking strategy, Japanese forces attacking Hangchow area are developing a menacing thrust towards the famous city from the direction of the Chekiang and Anhwei border. Moving swiftly from its base on Kwangteh and Szean, a Japanese column is reported to have reached a point only 20 miles north-west of its objective.

After capturing Lichu, a small town on the highway from Szean to Yuhang, 15 kilometres west of Hangchow, the Japanese are now building strong defence works around the town, preparatory to establishing it as a forward base for future operations.

The Japanese are believed to be planning to strike next at Huanghu, 33 kilometres from Yuhang. From Huanghu the attackers will likely drive on Yuhang. The capture of this latter point would virtually seal the fate of Hangchow as the town controls one of the two highways on which Chinese soldiers can transport supplies and reinforcements.

Admit Seriousness Of Threat

The Chinese forces believe this new Japanese move is by far the most serious threat to Hangchow, pointing out that the outflanking movement from the Chekiang-Anhwei border, with frontal attacks along the Shanghai-Hangchow railway and the Hangchow-Wuchow and Shanghai-Hangchow highways would increase the difficulty of defending the city.

"Notified Zone" Proposed

The Consular Corps here is discussing with the Japanese a proposal for the establishment of a "notified zone" in Hangchow for the protection of refugees in the event of the city being bombed and bombarded by the Japanese.

The proposed zone would include the French Concession and special areas along the Bund.

The plan is understood to be meeting with considerable opposition by the Japanese who maintain the zone would interfere with Japanese military operations.

A section of the river is included in the proposed protected area because of the numerous foreign warships and merchantmen which are at present held up at Hangchow because of the Chinese booms below that city.

The Consular Corps insists on the term "notified zone" being applied, as they wish to emphasise that while they are doing their best they are unable to guarantee the safety of lives and property within the area.—Reuter.

Chinese Progress In North

Haichow, Dec. 24. With crack reinforcements rushed to the front, Chinese forces are advancing southward along the Tientsin-Pukow Railway zone, according to military advisers.

One crack unit has already proceeded south of Mingkuang, Chianhan and Changpaling and are pressing on the Japanese at Shanghai. Several columns are also moving on towards Chuanhsien, strategic Anhwei city, and Chuanhsien.

Another report states that fierce fighting has broken out along the Grand Canal at Kaoyu and Shaopu, north of Yangchow.

The situation around Huai-nan is quiet.—Central News.

Police Frustrate Tientsin Kidnapping

JAPANESE RAIDERS CLOSE TO HONGKONG

Fly Over Lantau On Morning Flight

Fifteen Japanese aeroplanes, apparently en route on bombing rendezvous on the Kowloon-Canton Railway, passed five miles westward of Tai-O, the principal township on Lantau Island, at approximately 8.45 a.m. to-day.

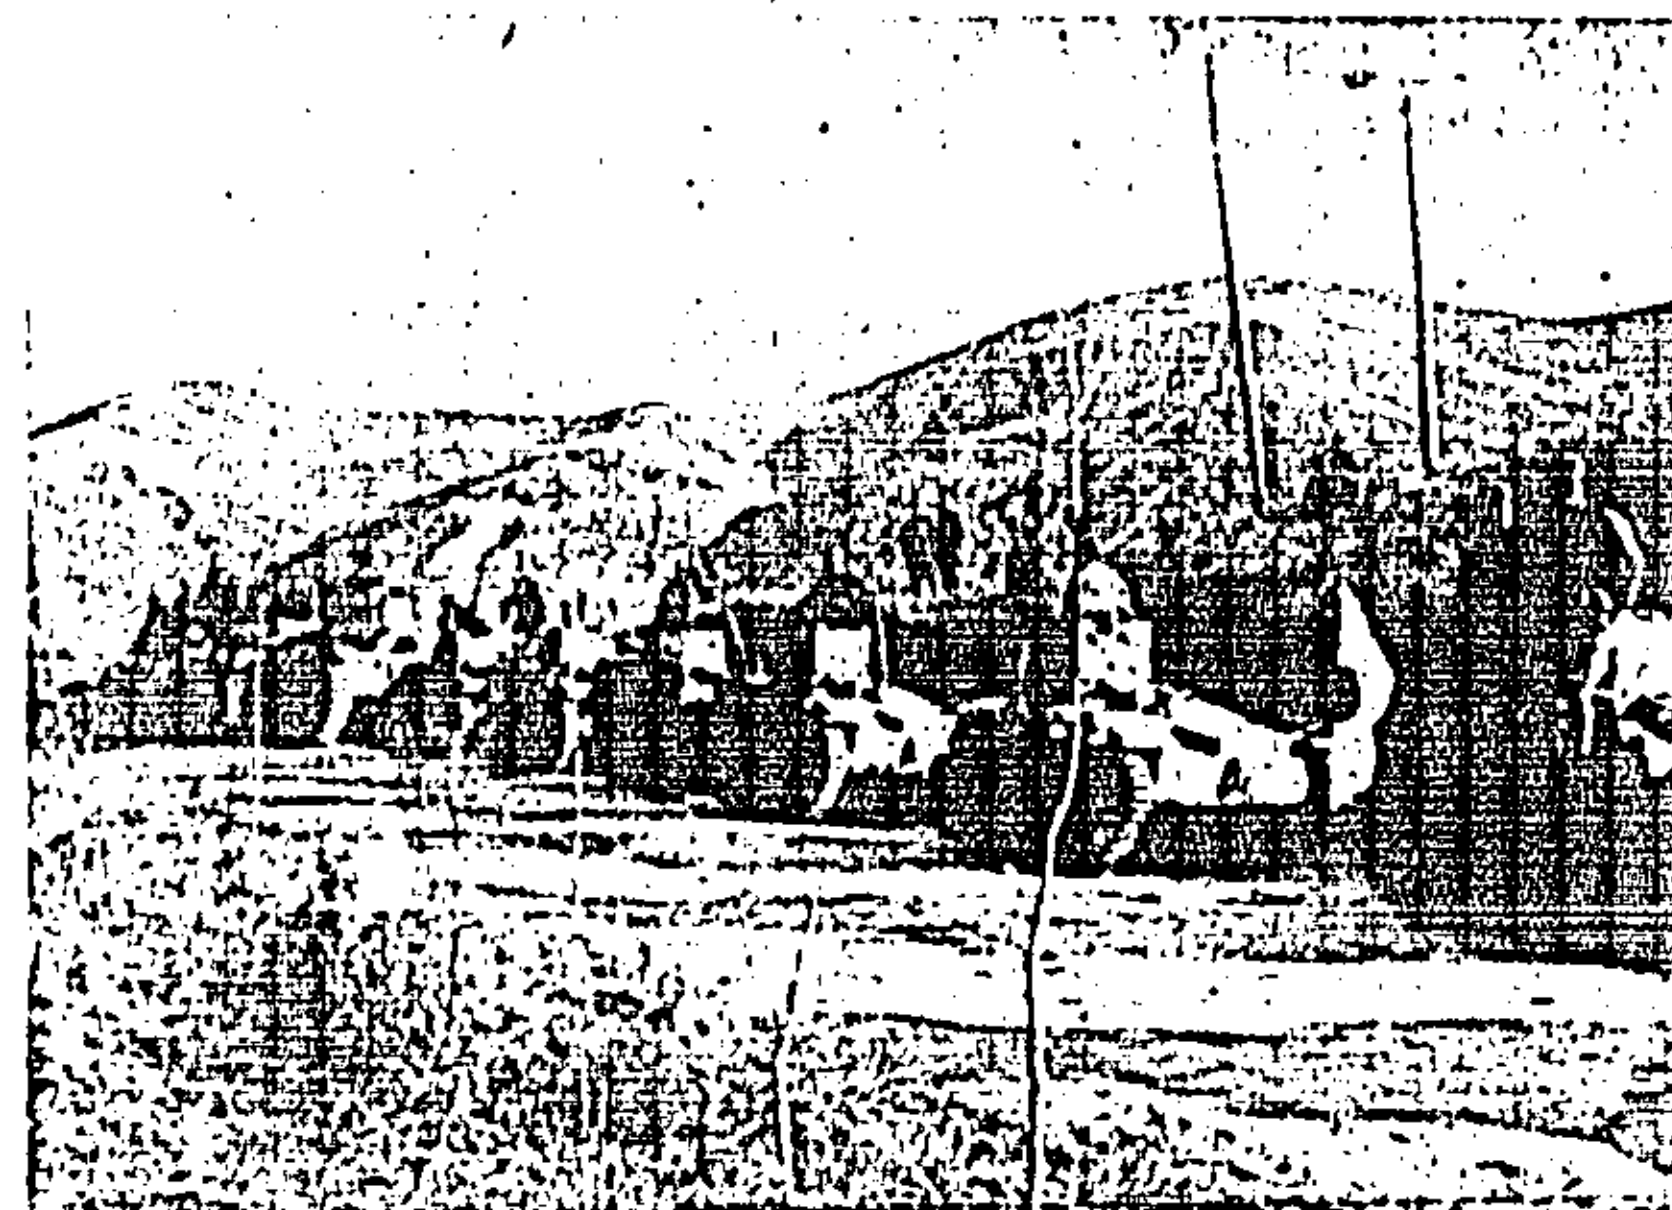

The planes were observed and reported from the Police Station at Tai-O.

Three-quarters of an hour after passing so close to British waters, the roar of the machines was heard as they returned to their base.

Heavy weather which descended over Lantau after the planes had passed out of sight on their raid prevented observation of their return. However, the roar of the machines indicated that they were either passing over British waters or were much closer than on the outward flight.

Tai O is on the north-western coast of Lantau, the largest island in the group comprising the Colony of Hongkong, and portions of its coastline constitute the western boundary of British territory.

TANK UNITS APPROACH NANKING

Photographed while a brief halt was called in the vicinity of Nanking during the recent attack on the former capital by the Japanese, this section of the mechanized army later played an important part in breaching the walls of the city. The line of tanks is shown on one of the roads leading through the hilly district surrounding Nanking.—Photo by Domei.

Evacuation Of Local Refugees Empties Old Laichikok Gaol

The Hongkong Government has already completed its plans to deal with any possible influx of Chinese across the Shum Chun River in the event of hostilities in South China.

But the plans are being kept a closely guarded secret.

The refugee position is becoming less acute in Hongkong. With the departure for Shanghai to-morrow of 19 refugees by the Lloyd Triestino liner Conte Verde and 17 by the M.M. liner D'Artagnan, it will be possible to close the Laichikok Refuge.

Arrival of 240 Hankow refugees by the "Christmas Express" is not expected to alter the situation to any material extent. The American and German consulates in Hongkong have promised to take care of their own nationals, and it is believed that not more than 100 refugees will require assistance. There is sufficient space available in the old Central British School to provide accommodation.

This morning there were 151 refugees at Laichikok and 35 in the Central British School. Laichikok will be emptied with the departure of 207 refugees by to-morrow's steamers. Christmas dinner—including the proverbial Christmas pudding—will be served to refugees at the C.B.S. to-morrow evening. It is hoped that the Hankow refugees will arrive in time to participate.

Many of the refugees arriving by train from Hankow will proceed directly to Shanghai as soon as steamer accommodation is available.

Navy Hunts Helpless Steamship

Four Men Picked Up In Open Boat

Istanbul, Dec. 23. The British fleet-tender, Olympus, picked up four men in an open boat near Malta. The men were from a Norwegian steamer which lost her propeller 60 miles off Malta and had drifted within 15 miles of the island. The mate and three seamen then took a boat in an attempt to reach shore but were unable to land. The steamer is still adrift, and British destroyers and naval planes are at present searching for her.—Reuter.

SEASON'S GREETINGS

The Hongkong Telegraph wishes to take this opportunity to wish all its readers, new and old, a happy Christmas Season. This newspaper will not be published Christmas Day, nor on Sunday, but will resume normal production Monday.

"CHRISTMAS EXPRESS" DEPARTS

Cancellations At Last Minute

Hankow, Dec. 24. Owing to last minute cancellations on the "Christmas Express," the train left Hankow yesterday with only 204 refugees of all nationalities for Hongkong. Instead of the 324 originally booked.

Hundreds of husbands and friends gathered on the Butterfield and Swire bulk at 6.30 a.m. yesterday to bid good-bye to the passengers. Many accompanied the refugees in launches across the river to the railway station at Wuchang.

Promptly at 9 o'clock the brightly lit train drew out of the busy station carrying its none-too-happy travellers, who waved last farewells.

138 WOMEN ABOARD

A London drizzle completed the quiet picture. Hopes that another international refugee train will be arranged are rising, and it is learned that negotiations are proceeding to send another batch of Hankow residents southward about December 28 or 29.

Yesterday's train took 107 Britons, 96 Americans, 41 Germans, 25 Russians, ten French, nine Italians, three Swedes and three Norwegians. Of the total number, 138 were women, 65 children and 71 men.

Providing everything goes as planned, the train should reach Canton at dawn on Christmas Day, and prospects are bright that the train will go straight through via the loopline to Hongkong.—Reuter.

ITALIAN ATTACKS RESENTED

Stirring Trouble By Radio Talks To Palestine

Mussolini's Poison Pen

London, Dec. 23.

Strong criticism of Italian anti-British propaganda was expressed by Lieut.-Comdr. R.T.H. Fletcher (Lab.) on a motion for the adjournment of the House of Commons for the Christmas recess to-day.

He accused Signor Benito Mussolini of being the poison pen of Europe and the whole world of international relations. Italy had started a completely mendacious story about Portuguese colonies when Anglo-Portuguese relations had recently improved. Since Signor Mussolini's personal message to Mr. Neville Chamberlain last July, the Bari broadcast had increased in violence. Bari had persistently stirred up agitation in Palestine and fomented discontent here, said Commander Fletcher. Italian agents practically give away radios to Arab chiefs which pick up the broadcasts. Talks in Arabic were now given daily.

Lord Cranborne, replying for the Government, said Mr. Anthony Eden, the Foreign Secretary, had sent for Count Grandi a few days ago and told him that unless the propaganda against Britain could be terminated, it would be impossible to create an atmosphere for the prosecution of a successful conversation aimed at improving mutual relations.

"We hope, and believe, the good sense of the Italians will see that our representations, which were effective on previous occasions, will be effective again. Otherwise it is clear we must take further measures," said Lord Cranborne.

He assured the House that the Government would not hesitate to take whatever measures it thought necessary or appropriate for the purpose.

ARABS MUST DIE

Jerusalem, Dec. 23. Four Arabs were sentenced to death at the Jaffa Assizes for the murder of another Arab during a highway robbery near Ramleh on July 20.

Eleven Arabs were sentenced to be killed when police and troops engaged a big Arab party near Arrabeh, west of Tiberias. The engagement followed a pincer-like movement carried out over several days by police and Trans-Jordan frontiersmen, co-

BRITISH, FRENCH COLLABORATE IN CHECKING CRIME

Ambassador's Niece Saved From Gang

Shanghai, Dec. 24.

How British and French police at Tientsin on December 11 frustrated an attempt by four foreigners to kidnap Mlle. Denise Theon, pretty 19-year-old daughter of Baroness Guillaume, and niece of the Belgian Ambassador to China, is related in a belated foreign report received to-day.

Baron Guillaume, the girl's step-father and brother of the Ambassador, is General Manager of the Credit Foncier in North China.

The foreigners arrested and detained by the police were:

J. P. M. Ferrer, well-known member of the French community in Tientsin; and three Russians, named Marcos, G. N. Keror, and Haumoff.

One of these, when arrested, was found to be carrying in his pocket a typed note addressed to Mlle. Denise, stating that her sister was badly injured and was at the British Hospital, where she was asked to proceed immediately.

ALERT SECRETARY

It appears this was intended to decoy the girl from the Country Club, where she was playing badminton. It was stated that a car was waiting for her, but the Secretary of the club, who had previously learned that the telephone was cut, said that Mlle. Denise was not on the premises. He noted that a number of Russians were in the car. The number of the car was taken and this eventually led to the arrest of the men two days later.

As a result of a statement made by them, Ferrer was detained for questioning. It is stated that the would-be kidnapers intended to keep their victim in a small detached building. Supposing this theory the police discovered a bottle of chloroform and a typed letter demanding $50,000 in ransom.

The windows of the building were draped with a dark material.—Reuter.

BRITAIN'S ATTITUDE STIFFENED

But Intentions Kept Close Secret

London, Dec. 23. All newspapers continue to give prominence to the China news which is now the first topic of public interest. The Government's intentions are a close secret but it is widely believed that the British attitude has been stiffened by recent events. Official circles regard the possibility of a Japanese threat to Canton with increasing equanimity, and are of the opinion that Tokyo is concerned by unwieldy commitments in which the army's exuberance has plunged Japan. The Japanese Government is now completely puzzled how to define the country's precise aims in China.

Mr. Quo Tai-chi, Chinese Ambassador to London, goes to Paris to-morrow to meet Continental Chinese Ambassadors in a conference in the presence of Mr. Cheng Kung-ku, who is now in Europe, and who will afterwards return to China.

The Lord Mayor's Chinese Relief Fund now totals £79,300. The Manchester fund has sent a first contribution of £500, and a further £500 is expected to be forwarded early in the new year.—Reuter.

H.K. Handling Big Mail For Christmas

Huge Increase Over Last Year

Hongkong's record Christmas mail is going through the hands of an augmented staff at the General Post Office this week.

Parcels and mail rooms have been hives of industry since Wednesday night, when the first batch of Christmas mail arrived by the P. & O. liner Corfu. Another parcels mail—one of the largest ever received in Hongkong—will arrive by the Blue Funnel liner Memnon this afternoon.

The Corfu brought the record consignment of 152 bags of mail on Wednesday, as compared with 96 bags of Christmas mail received in Hongkong last Christmas.

Included in the Corfu mail were 943 parcels, while a further 993 parcels are due by the Memnon to-day making a total of 1,936 parcels by the two ships. This represents an amazing increase over last year's Christmas parcels.

Inward air mail has been equally phenomenal, and an equally large consignment is expected by the Delphinus on Monday. So great was the air mail carried last week-end that freight had to be abandoned, the Delphinus making a special trip to Hanoi to pick freight taken there by the Dorado.

Three nationalised aircraft factories—Levallois, Argenteuil and one at Sartrouville near Paris—have been occupied by workers who state "that their action is an expression of solidarity with the workers at Colombes who are threatened with forcible expulsion from the factory they have occupied."—Reuter.

Shanghai, Dec. 24. Madame Sun Yat-sen and Madame H. H. Kung went to Canton yesterday together. It is believed they are on their way to Hankow to meet Madame Chiang Kai-shek in an historic union of the three Soong sisters.—United Press.

Practical advice that will help you to Look your best for Christmas PARTIES

YOU will be going to lots of parties this and Bond-street. Let's start from the feet and work upwards.

Christmas. You have got your frocks planned and hanging ready in the cupboard. A billowy chiffon for dancing; a cocktail suit; a couple of tunics, one plain and one fluffy, to go with a slipper satin skirt for pantomime and cinema evenings, perhaps a new evening coat. But what about those details that are going to take you out of the just pretty class and make you really smart?

How to Use Up The Turkey

By GLORIA

Turkey Scramble

CHOP turkey finely, and a little ham, add to the required number of beaten eggs, season well. Melt butter in saucepan, add egg mixture and stir until cooked.

Savoury Turkey Fritters

MINCE some turkey, ham, sausage and stuffing. Mix with bread-crumbs, bind with an egg, dip in batter, and fry in deep fat until golden brown.

Turkey and Ham Pie

CUT up turkey and ham—not too finely—and put into pie-dish with a few balls of stuffing. If you have any make about 1/2 pint white sauce, pour over meat and leave to cool. Make pastry, cover pie, and bake about 1 1/2 hour.

Potted Turkey

MINCE turkey finely and pound in a mortar. To half a pound of turkey add 2oz. of melted butter, and season well. Rub the mixture through a sieve, press it into pots, and cover with clarified butter.

Shoes

Smartest evening shoes show lacquered the nails winking through strappings of plaited braid or kid. Choose this kind in preference to toeless sandals. Heels low. Colour should match your frock (unless you have exceptional feet—beware of strong colour contrasts in your slippers). Sandals of plaited gold or silver braid are a useful choice as they can be worn with almost anything.

Gloves

Choose plain suede or kid. Fancy gauntlets are fun but need a lot of living up to. Bright colours with black frocks still fashionable, but must be really well cut and of finest suede.

Handbags

Portmanteau is the newest shape and, like that useful piece of luggage opens out square. Usually made of strong brocades. Party cases are much cheaper and in every colour and material. A new vanity case from America is not much bigger than a pocket comb case and contains rouge, powder and lipsticks. In pastel coloured enamels with jewelled clasp.

Handkerchiefs

Embroidery newer than initials. A square of chiffon, embroidered in gold or silver thread in a pattern of stars, crescents or tiny flowers, is a lovely idea for evening and easy to copy.

Make-up & Hair

From an evening make-up try to get an Oriental look; it suits brightly-patterned materials: the lacquered satins and brocades that are used for evening coats and tunics.

The new Hollywood evening make-up has a foundation cream of a delicate amber shade. An ordinary cream rouge can be worn with the make-up, but nasturtium is the shade recommended and it is becoming to every type. Two powders are used. First a light banana shade, then a dusting of amber. Lipstick: nasturtium with, of course, nail varnish to match.

Green or brown eyeshadow with or without a touch of gold or silver. Applied with due care, this make-up will carry you through the most riotous Christmas partying without having to re-powder.

A bow of velvet tied like a true lover's knot (if such fantasies suit you) is newer than a posy of flowers for wearing in the hair. But if you are in doubt about wearing any kind of head-dress, follow fashion's surest leaders and don't.

OUR GUIDE TO THE CINEMAS

"Varsity Show" (Queen's Theatre to-morrow)—Excellent type of film for Christmas entertainment. Song hits, high-spot dancing and wise-cracks abound, with some romance thrown in for good measure. Featuring Dick Powell, Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians, and among the strong supporting cast is Ted Healy, who died this week.

"All Baba Goes To Town" (King's Theatre, to-day and to-morrow)—Eddie Cantor hitting new heights of spectacular fun-making and entertainment. Once again the inimitable Eddie scores a grand hit, and this picture is bound to satisfy the most discerning of critics.

"Vogues of 1938" (Majestic Theatre to-morrow)—Strikes a new note in entertainment, and is a masterpiece in technical colour. Outstanding performances by Warner Baxter and Joan Bennett.

"Make A Wish" (Alhambra Theatre, to-morrow)—Bobby Breen, golden-voiced soprano in another vocal offering of rare quality. Basil Rathbone and Marion Claire give nice studies in supporting parts.

"Captain Courageous" (Oriental Theatre, to-day and to-morrow)—Another Rudyard Kipling classic brought to the screen with striking effect. Brilliant and distinctive performances by Freddie Bartholomew, Spencer Tracy and Lionel Barrymore.

SWAN, CULBERTSON & FRITZ LATEST REPORTS

New York, Dec. 23.
S. C. & F. New York correspondent cables:

Stocks: The market moves narrowly as holiday influences reduce interest. The outlook for the near future is encouraging.

Cotton: To-day's market was a narrow holiday market. The textile markets are quiet, but prices are firm. Sports are steady.

Wheat: Exports were light. Southern Hemisphere offerings are increasing. There is a forecast of rains in the South-West. Buyers are waiting for easy spots.

Corn: The market is featureless. Rubber: Further hedging in c.i.f. rubber was the only feature in to-day's market.

Sugar: The market was dull, but prices were firm.

S. C. & F. Dow Jones summary of yesterday's markets:

There has been further pre-holiday curtailment of business. Railroad operations were at 65% of capacity, but business otherwise offered little sentiment to the market. There has been an acceleration of bank clearings, but they are still below 1936. Christmas business reports are spotty.

Curb stocks and bonds are lower and the respective markets are quiet. Government bonds are irregularly higher.

Wall Street Journal morning comment:

The "Journal" says that Wall Street regarded yesterday's market as a profit-taking affair, with most of the selling done by professional traders.

Chart compilers expect some important market resistance if the industrial average reaches 130 to 135 while, if this territory is pierced,

New P. & O. Skipper Sailed In Windjammers

Captain H. Elliott-Smith, who is well-known in Singapore, has retired from the P. and O. after 38 years in the company's service.

His place as Commander of the Chitral has been taken by Captain W. E. L. S. Pocock who thus takes up his first permanent appointment to a passenger ship.

Captain Pocock went to sea in September, 1895, serving his apprenticeship in the Star of Italy, a sailing ship. Incidentally, he is one of the few liner commanders who hold an extra master ticket for square-rigged ships.

He joined the P. and O. as 4th Officer of the Aroala and served in a number of ships.

During the war he remained in the P. and O. service and was in the Maloja as 2nd Officer when, in 1916 she was mined in the Channel with the loss of 122 lives.

During the post-war years, Captain Pocock had a varied experience with all types of ships and when the new vessel Viceroy of India was ready he was appointed as her Chief Officer.

His first command was the Mirzapore, a cargo vessel employed in the P. and O. Bombay-Far East service. On returning to England he made voyages temporarily in command of the Ranchi and Carthage.

DID NO HOUSEWORK FOR SIX MONTHS

Kept in Bed With Rheumatism

Knees swollen—neck stiff with pain—unable to get out of bed. That was the condition of this woman when she began to take Kruschen Salts. Now she writes this letter:—"I have had rheumatism in the neck and knees for years, and was bedfast for several months. I could get no relief from anything I took. Then a friend of mine told me to try Kruschen Salts. I got a bottle, and that first bottle took the swelling out of my knees. Soon my neck too was free from pain. It is three months since I started taking Kruschen, and now I am up and doing my housework—which I could not do for six months. I would not be without Kruschen."—(Mrs.) F.S.

Kruschen Salts brings quick relief from the cutting, stabbing pains of rheumatism because it actually rids your blood of every trace of poisonous uric acid. Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts dull the sharp edges of these uric acid crystals, then dissolve them away altogether. Other ingredients of these Salts assist Nature to wash out these dissolved crystals through the natural channels.

MIRACLE OF SURGERY

TRANSFUSION OF OWN BLOOD SAVES WOMAN

Mme Magda de Fontange, who created a sensation by shooting the French Count de Chambrun whom she accused of breaking up her romance with Mussolini, was refused admission into the United States by Immigration authorities when she tried to reach Hollywood. The only view she got of New York was when she gazed through porthole of the Normandie.

To have delayed transfusion until the arrival of a blood donor would have been fatal. The human body contains about five pints of blood. This woman had already "lost" three pints when her heart stopped beating.

COLLAPSED

AMAZING FIGHT WITH DEATH SUCCEEDS

London, Nov. 20.

Receiving three pints of her own blood by transfusion after her heart had stopped beating, a woman aged 34, the wife of a Civil Servant, has been saved by a remarkable operation performed at Croydon General Hospital.

Dr. C. J. C. Siggers, 31-year-old resident surgical officer, and his assistant, Dr. Eric Ashman, were the men in this life-and-death drama of the operating theatre.

lapsed. Ephedrine—a drug to raise the blood pressure—was administered as soon as the pulse failed.

An incision was made just below the ribs and Dr. Siggers began massaging the heart through the diaphragm.

The heart started beating again, and as soon as it was considered safe the task of blood transfusion was begun.

One pint of blood was taken from the incision, passed through a sterilised gauze and restored to the patient by the orthodox means—through a vein in the arm.

Two further pints which were drained into the abdomen were taken after a second incision, and transfused by the same means.

NEARLY BETTER

It was not until then that Dr. Siggers could proceed with the operation proper.

Transfusion with the patient's own blood is only rarely possible, writes the Medical Correspondent. Hemorrhage must be a large one into the abdominal cavity. There must be no germs present such as those from inflammation or from the bowel. The sufferer must be in the hands of a surgeon with full equipment for a major operation.

It is performed after serious injury to an organ like the liver or spleen, generally following accidents. Operation reveals the grave condition, and there is no time to find a blood donor. As soon as the surgeon has stopped the hemorrhage the blood is filtered rapidly, treated to prevent clotting, and injected into a vein by his assistant while he finishes the operation. It has the same effect as an ordinary blood transfusion.

Rubber Suit For 'Iron Lung Man'

Frederick B. Snite, millionaire's son, who has lived in an "iron lung" for two years, hopes in a few days to be transferred to a light-weight sponge-rubber "lung."

In this he will be able to move his arms, legs, and neck, which he has not done since he was stricken with infantile paralysis while in China on a world tour. He travelled in the "iron lung" half-way across the world to his home in Florida, has maintained a cheerful interest in everything around him, and has been visited regularly by the girl whom he hopes to marry.

Lately, however, his medical attendants noticed that he was becoming depressed because of his inability to move. They hope to see an improvement when he moves into his new "lung."

Montreal. The trade in ships for breaking-up has greatly increased at Vancouver lately.

Hostilities in the Far East have given Japan an insatiable appetite for scrap metal, and much of the business is done through that port. The 17-year-old San Francisco steamer Fort Armstrong, 3,249 tons, owned by the Charles Nelson Co., recently loaded and cleared for Japan with a Japanese crew on board. The ship was bought by the Mitsui Co. She will be broken up. There are many cases similar to that of the Fort Armstrong. The ships are brought to Vancouver and loaded with supplies of war. On arrival in Japan both cargoes and hulls are utilised with all speed.

SEEKING A COOK

Aldershot, Nov. 29.

Mr. Hore-Belisha, Minister for War, presented medals to Army cooks at Aldershot to-day and explained why he has never married.

To the cooks he said: "I hope you will spread the love of cooking to your wives, if you have any."

The best cook in the Army, Fusilier T. Garraway, of the 2nd Battalion Royal Fusiliers—his home is at South Tottenham—has cool hands. He is blond, twenty, and bashful. He prefers making meat pies, but he can bake a fancy tart as well.

The Army Cooking School with 100 students in various classes insists that its pastry be kept cold before it is baked. Warm hands make heavy pies they say.

You could not find a tin of bully beef in the Army to-day. Instead they give you tinned salmon done up with sauce and bits of greenery. They give you recipes for fifty kinds of pudding. "You use the same foundation," a sergeant cook said. "Put in currants if you want a currant pudding. Take out the fruit, add treacle—treacle pudding. Take out the treacle, add marmalade—golden pudding."

It goes on and on like that. Regular Army cooks had twenty-seven different puddings on display to-day.

There was an "In Town To-night" pudding, made with marmalade and with a flag flying from its crest. Those puddings were made by Peter Eaton, a butlerman. He cooks for his wife and two daughters on Sundays sometimes.

ROYALTY MUST RECEIVE NO PRIVILEGES

THE KING has made it known as his wish to members of the Royal Family that they should not ask or seek special traffic privileges except when they are performing official duties.

This includes car-parking. In future royal cars will be parked in the same way as others when visiting places of amusement or friends' homes in congested traffic areas.

On October 14, says the Daily Express, one hundred taxi-drivers drove slowly in a "protest" procession from Leicester-square to Piccadilly-circus. They caused traffic hold-ups.

They alleged that when the Duchess of Kent dined with friends at the Cafe de Paris, her car was allowed to remain outside—though there is a garage nearby—while taxicabs were moved on. Since then taxicabs have parked, as usual outside the cafe.

REFERENDUM ON WAR

Mr. Louis Ludlow, member of the House of Representatives at Washington, is a Congressman who has never been prominent in the news outside his home state of Indiana until just recently. But not long ago he hit upon the not entirely original idea of submitting to referendum the most momentous decision that any Government can be called upon to make —the question of whether or not to go to war. And he has now become a figure of national importance, whose name is splashed in headlines all over the country and is known abroad as well. A controversy rages around the referendum scheme; for on the face of it there is much to commend it.
Closer analysis shows its flaws, however.

It will probably be argued by its opponents, indeed this is their main point, that a democratic people has the right to show its desires when confronted with the possibility of having to make great sacrifices.
Why, since a country is entitled to express its choice in respect to political candidates for the highest offices, when it even elects the judges of its courts, its state governors, as in America, should it not declare its will for or against war? It would seem logical that a free people should have that right.
Indirectly, it has. It must be supposed the public is adequately represented in its Government and that these representatives know their business and serve their constituents well. It must be surmised that the people who are responsible for the foreign policy are also responsible to the state, and that they will not rush rashly into dangers through stupid or blundering diplomacy. For as long as a nation is a nation, it must have leaders, and it must trust them and follow whosoever they shall lead. Otherwise there will be anarchy and chaos, and peace, as an aim, is out of the question.

The idea of a referendum on war looks nice on paper, but put to the practical test, what will

Blessed are they that mourn:

Blessed are the meek: for they Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled.

Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy.

Blessed are the pure in heart:
for they shall see God.

Blessed are the peace-makers:
for they shall be called the children of God.

Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake:
for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for My sake.

Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven: for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you.

YE are the salt of the earth: but if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted? It is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be foot of men.

be found? That it is unwieldy and unworkable. Wars have a way of developing almost overnight. Some-one sinks someone else's warship—as in the case which caused the Spanish-American war—and tension develops. The explanation is not satisfactory; satisfaction is not forthcoming after heated hours of recrimination; words are weighted with a new significance and tragic portent, and the time arrives when an ultimatum is delivered. Shall the nation vote then? How long would it take to count the ballot? Would it be a representative vote anyway? People would be inflamed with passion as a result of the insult suffered and the lives lost. Would they vote with wisdom and with a thorough knowledge of the facts as their statesmen, who are guiding them, possess? Not likely.

Another example. Japan and the United States are discussing a critical situation which has arisen out of the sinking of the Panay. Will the United States go to war? Take a referendum to-day. Suppose the vote was overwhelmingly affirmative, what would be the effect on relations between the two countries? It is not difficult to imagine. Suppose the result were strongly negative; what would be the effect upon Japan? And suppose tension grew greater to-morrow, and the next day, and there was another "incident" on the day following.
Would the American people go to a referendum every day? Or would they get a little tired of shutting up shop and trotting to the polls, and pick up a gun and do something about it.

A Government can tell fairly accurately the temper of its people without recourse to referendum. If a Government is hard-driven by circumstances towards war, it will be found the people are moving close behind, due, in part, to the publicity given to developments. Generally speaking, the world is safer in the hands of its experienced statesmen and diplomats than in the uncertain grip of an excitable public.

THIS IS CHRISTIANITY Do you remember it?

TO-MORROW IS THE DAY WE CELEBRATE AS THE ANNIVERSARY OF THE BIRTH OF CHRIST. IN HONG-KONG AND ELSEWHERE THROUGHOUT THE WORLD THE CHURCH WILL BROAD-CAST AN APPEAL FOR A GREAT RELIGIOUS REVIVAL. HERE IS OUR LORD'S OWN STATEMENT OF THE PHILOSOPHY THAT CONQUERED THE WORLD

Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect....

AND when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are: for they love to pray standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men. Verily I say unto you,
They have their reward.

But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly.

But when ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do: for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking.

Be not ye therefore like unto them: for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask Him.

After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father which art in heaven. Hallowed be thy name.

Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.

Give us this day our daily bread.

And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.

And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil:
For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever. Amen.

For if ye forgive not men their trespasses neither will your heavenly Father forgive your trespasses....

LAY not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal:

But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal:

For where your treasure is,
there will your heart be also.

The light of the body is the eye: if therefore thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light.

But if thine eye be evil, thy whole body shall be full of darkness. If, therefore, the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness!

NO man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one and love the other; or else he will hold to the one and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon.

Therefore I say unto you, Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment?

Behold the fowls of the air:
for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns;
yet your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they?

Ye are the light of the world.
A city that is set on a hill can-

Neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick: and it giveth light unto all that are in the house.

Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven....

YE have heard that it and whosoever shall kill shall be

But I say unto you, That whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause shall be in danger of the judgment: and whosoever shall say to his brother, Raca, shall be in danger of the council: but whosoever shall say, Thou fool, shall be in danger of hell fire.

Therefore if thou bring thy

Leave there thy gift before

People in the News.

Santa Claus: Who Is He?

SANTA Claus is the only person in the news who matters at all on Christmas Eve. He has been in the news at this season of the year for centuries, but there is always something new to write about him; or else something old that is worth repeating.

There are, one hears, some parents in Hongkong who refuse to tell their children about a Father Christmas who comes over snow-covered fields on Christmas Eve in a sleigh drawn by reindeer; for children who have lived in the tropics all their lives know ice and snow only as they see it in the cold storage depots.

So some Hongkong children learn about a Father Christmas who lives on Christmas Island, only a few hundred miles away. In keeping with the modern tradition he flies to Hongkong by seaplane.

AN INDIAN VILLAGE

BUT have you heard of a Santa Claus in the United States? It is a small village in Indiana where a real Father Christmas lives.

For the past few weeks the village of Santa Claus has been receiving truck loads of letters and parcels to be remailed all over the country with the Santa Claus postmark on their stamps.

Hundreds of other letters have been received addressed to Santa Claus himself by children all over the country. Many of the letters are from poor children and their only chance of receiving presents to-night is their faith in Santa Claus.

FOR 40 YEARS

SANTA Claus does not disappoint them. He is represented by the village postmaster Mr. Oscar Phillips. It has been the habit of Mr. Phillips to send on letters from children to church and charity organizations. These have eagerly operated in keeping the children's faith alive and they are busy to-day.

LITTLE GIRL'S DOUBT

AMERICANS have a lot of stories to tell you about Santa Claus. There is one which concerns Dr. Laura Virginia Douglas who, as a girl, wanted to know about Santa Claus and wrote to a newspaper whose editorial in reply has become a permanent addition to Christmas literature.

"Please tell me the truth, is there a Santa Claus?" Virginia O'Hanlon, then 11 years old, wrote to the editor of the New York Sun to settle the doubt which comes to all little boys and girls at some stage of their lives.

The letter was received by Mr. Edward Mitchell, then in charge of the newspaper's editorial page who turned it over to his associate, Mr. Francis Church to answer.

Mr. Church wrote an article which is reproduced in newspapers in the States every Christmas, as the classic expression of Christmas sentiment.

A SPECIAL AGE

THE answer which Virginia O'Hanlon (now Dr. Laura Virginia Douglas, a school teacher in New York) read in the Sun was as follows:

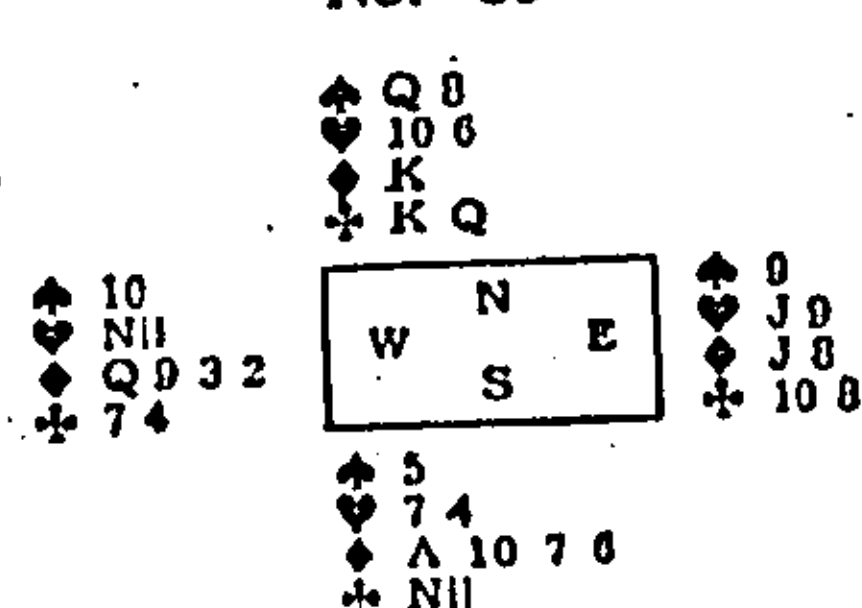

"We take pleasure in answering at once and thus prominently the communication below expressing at the same time our great gratification that its faithful author is numbered among the friends of The Sun.

"Dear Editor—I am 8 years old. Some of my little friends say there is no Santa Claus. Papa says if you see it in the Sun it is true. There is a Santa Claus?"

"Virginia, your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the scepticism of a sceptical age. They do not believe except they see. They think that nothing can be real which is not comprehensible by their little minds.

A Lay Sermon

By HUGH REDWOOD

AS employed in this verse, the word "author" means one who sets something in motion. Jesus, Alpha and Omega, is pictured as the starter of a race and also as its judge. But with equal truth we may think of Him as an author in the literary sense, and one who is writing still.

Great writers are seldom known to us personally, yet we talk of knowing and liking them, or disliking them, as the case may be. Because of "The Pickwick Papers" or "Hamlet," or maybe, "The Four Just Men," we say we like Dickens, or Shakespeare, or Edgar Wallace. The illustration is simple, but searching. How many readers have we won for Jesus? How many have come to know Him and love Him because our faith is His authorship?

Jesus Christ is a ready writer. His output is unceasing. Tales of adventure and exploration, stirring romances, wonderful love stories, He is always engaged on something new, with a yielded career for His pages. And all the time His greatest work is drawing near its completion. For in the hearts of those who love Him, He has for ages been writing His Life.

Episode From

Inspector Playfair's Notebook

"THIS place Thorpethwaite," said Sergeant Dumbell, as the train moved out of King's Cross. "I've never heard of it, sir. Where is it?"

Playfair shut the door. "Not too bad," he observed, "getting a compartment to ourselves. Influence, Dumbell, influence. As to where Thorpethwaite is, it's a bit of a tongue-twister the name, hey?—you're about as well-informed as I am."

"But," he unlocked his attaché-case. "I've plenty of maps and things here. We change at Doncaster, I know that, and we arrive about half-past three."

DEATH IN THE VILLAGE

The Thorpethwaite murder case had already aroused a frenzy of excitement. That was partly why the Chief Constable of Bardenshire had made something like this. "When you heard of John Robinson," he said sternly to call in Scotland Yard. "Can't afford to take chances," had been his succinct comment.

A village girl, Susan Arkroyd, evidence. No facts. But, all the same, I know that he killed her—I'm pretty, intelligent and popular—had been found the previous morning dead in a dark alley-way. There was as yet no certain clue to the identity of her murderer, or to the motive for the crime.

"But what is suspected, Dumbell?" said Playfair, as, in the train, he reviewed what evidence there was. "It's one of the students from the college."

"Yes, there's some sort of college there. It's affiliated, I believe, to the local university—both men and women students attend—and some of the men students are said to be pretty tough. There's been trouble in the village before."

"But surely," said Dumbell, "if you're actually suspect a student, they've something more definite than that to go on. You know, sir, some concrete piece of evidence."

UNDER OBSERVATION

Playfair smiled slightly. "Not to be fobbed off, hey Dumbell? Well, you're quite right. There is a concrete piece of evidence. It's an address book containing, among other things, the names of several of the students. Half a dozen, I gather, in all."

"None of them has been questioned yet. I've given instructions that they're to be kept under observation. (Not very difficult in a residential college—at least, the men live in college and the women in a neighbouring boarding house.)"

Arrived at Thorpethwaite, the two detectives were soon closed with the Chief Constable. Here they were informed that the "latest development," which amounted, in fact, to nothing.

There had been an inquest, with purely formal evidence and an adjournment for police inquiries. And the time of the girl's death had been deduced with some precision. She had been strangled, according to the local experts, some time between nine and eleven on Tuesday night. It was now Thursday afternoon.

A WOMAN SCORNED

A number of names had, at different times, been coupled with that of the dead girl. The likeliest of these suspects appeared to be John Robinson, a student at the college. His was one of the names that appeared in Susan's address-book.

He had several times, Playfair learned, been seen with the girl in the village. But there was no direct evidence connecting Robinson, or any one else, with the crime that had recently been committed.

Having digested this much, and having also familiarized himself with the routine of the college, Playfair had detailed Dumbell for various inquiries in the village. And he had no sooner arrived at the college, where a room had been placed at his disposal, than there came a knock at the door.

"Come in," called Playfair, who was expecting to see the College Secretary. Instead, there entered a girl of 19 or 20. An attractive-looking girl, whose cheeks were flushed with excitement.

"This—murder," she began. "My name's Irene Collier. She gripped the table with both hands. "I hate to be here, but I felt I had to come. It's—public duty, isn't it? You see, Inspector, I don't you, that that's a serious thing to tell me?"

"Of course I do, Inspector. But I must speak out, mustn't I? The murderer, I'm certain, is a student here named John Robinson."

She covered her face with her hands. "It's too awful that I should be telling you this. He was once—rather keen on me."

Playfair nodded. He had expected something like this. "When you heard of John Robinson," he said sternly to call in Scotland Yard. "Can't afford to take chances," had been his succinct comment.

The girl shuddered. "No positive evidence. No facts. But, all the same, I know that he killed her—I'm pretty, intelligent and popular—had been found the previous morning dead in a dark alley-way. There was as yet no certain clue to the identity of her murderer, or to the motive for the crime."

"But what is suspected, Dumbell?" said Playfair, as, in the train, he reviewed what evidence there was. "It's one of the students from the college."

SHE LAYS A TRAP

Leaving Playfair, the girl walked across to the students' Common Room. And here, as chance would have it, she met John Robinson coming out. He seemed to be in high spirits.

"Hallo, John," he hailed her. "Coming to tea with me?"

"I can't, I was looking for you, actually. There's a Scotland Yard Inspector here, John, and he wants to have a talk with you."

"With me? But—what on earth?"

"Tuesday night?... Tuesday night? ... I was in my room working. Why?"

"You weren't, John. You were out in the village. And, what's more, I've told the Inspector so. You weren't in college. Anyone can prove it."

"No one can prove it. I was in my room. I tell you."

"What about the evening roll-call?"

"It was there."

"What about the fire-drill?" John looked startled. "You see, John, you weren't at the fire-drill. And that's what I told the Inspector."

John's expression changed. "Irene—you hate me! I didn't know before. And I didn't know about the fire-drill either. Then, with another of his lightning changes of mood, he pulled himself together."

"You poor fish," he said contemptuously. "Say that I wasn't at the fire-drill. No one will believe you, because, as it happens, I was there. It'll only be my word against yours. I remember it now, my green-eyed friend; thank a thousand times for reminding me. What's your word worth against mine?"

PLAYFAIR MAKES AN ARREST

And he marched off with squared shoulders for his interview with Playfair.

As he entered the room where Playfair sat with Dumbell, he heard the former quoting poetry. "Hell knows no fury like a woman scorned."

John Robinson, the murderer of Susan Arkroyd, laughed inwardly. "That's just what they'll all say having also familiarized himself with the routine of the college, Playfair had detailed Dumbell for various inquiries in the village. And he had no sooner arrived at the college, where a room had been placed at his disposal, than there came a knock at the door."

Twenty minutes later Joshua Playfair arrested him. Why? Solution on Page Three

CHINESE PAINTING

THE production of objects destined for the purpose of artistic embellishment is common to every age and to every people. Some nations like the French, the Italians and the Japanese have made more progress in this sphere of endeavour than others. But of all the peoples of the globe, the Chinese on account of their amazing versatility have earned the unique distinction of being consummate masters in every field of art. Even their first tiresome and groping efforts executed during the period of the Han dynasty (206 B. C.—A. D. 220) reveal in their primitive form and colouring the elements of a remarkable culture. As all lovers of art know, the characteristics of aesthetic appreciation amongst the Chinese manifest themselves in the employment of magnificent combinations of exquisite colours and wondrous skill of composition. These factors are perhaps best exhibited in their efforts of pictorial delineation; for as illustrators, the Chinese are peerless, and have rendered the world their eternal debtors on account of the decorative features of their art which may be truly said surpasses that of the West by its degree of unprecedented splendour.

T. PAUL GREGORY

brated for the glories of its ceramics and painting. Indeed, to the Sung artists pictorial representation was a passion, and some of their work has been classed as amongst the greatest which the world has ever seen.

AMONGST the galaxy of matchless painters who graced the period of the Sung was Wan Naam-t'in. In the consensus of critical opinion, he created "transcripts of scenery that for breadth, atmosphere and picturesque beauty can scarcely be surpassed, and the points in which he differs from modern European artists are counterpoised by the more essential elements of artistic excellence." So highly esteemed is his work that Chinese artists for the past seven centuries have taken him as the model par excellence and have endeavoured to emulate his marvellous style. To this day the majority of Chinese landscapes in water-colour are frankly based on the work of this great master.

THE artists of the Ming Dynasty (A.D. 1368-1644) excelled in portraiture, and we have outstanding examples of their polished technique. The delineation of the female face and figure was their especial forte, and those pictures which have survived the ravages of time are justly esteemed for their fragile delicacy of outline and judicious refinement of colouring. Painting during the time of the Ming period became elevated to the level of a polite accomplishment of the gentry, and Chinese albums record the names of many accomplished men and women whose work was acclaimed by the dilettanti of that day.

During the time of the Sung and Ming, Chinese artists paid much attention to the representation of birds and animals. The paintings themselves whilst lacking in the perspective, which we of the West are wont to associate with pictures of this kind, are nevertheless so infused with vivid realism that it is doubtful if any other people have been more successful in imparting such vitality to the pictured object. There is, however, no such elaboration of detail as in the work of Western artists, as for instance, that of Edwin Landseer and Rosa Bonheur; for the Chinese master of the brush deemed the depicting of mere detail as of less consequence than the expression of the actual soul or spirit behind the idea of the artist.

THE Ts'ing or Manchu dynasty, whilst politically a tragic epoch, was in the sphere of art a truly great period in Chinese history; for the encouragement given to the cultivation of belletristic accomplishments by the great Emperors Kang-hsi, Yung-cheng and Ch'ien-lung—themselves virtuosi of ability—was so great that it has been said that almost the whole of the literati were more or less imbued with a desire to dabble in the art of painting. Much of the work of the latter reveals skill of a high order, and to this day, there may be found in the collections of Chinese connoisseurs many examples of painting which evoke the admiration and praise of the beholder. Some of these Ts'ing period paintings are unsigned and others bear merely the seal of the artist distinguished by the title of Kui-sz, or "retired scholar"—a modest appellation signifying that the hand which painted the picture did not seek to win the acclaim of the world.

The greatest exponent of the talent and ingenuity of the Ts'ing school of Chinese painting is represented by the master, Kui Kwoo-t'suen, a Cantonese artist who flourished during the early years of the last century. In his work are found the sublime concept of subject, the exquisite mastery of colouring, the consummate skill and the ecstatic poetic sense of typical Chinese genius.

It may be mentioned here that the Chinese have never taken much interest in the style of Western art. Painting in oils whilst not unknown in China, has been more or less relegated to the works produced in the ateliers of lesser-known artists. The introduction of the methods of oil painting is attributed to the early Jesuit missionaries, although certain of the pupils of George Chinnery, the Irish artist who resided at Canton during the early thirties of the last century, were instrumental in popularising working in oils to a limited extent. Only one of Chinnery's pupils attained any eminence and this was the one whom foreigners called "Lam-quan". This artist maintained a studio on the island of Honam across the river from Canton sometime during the years 1840-'47, and was reputed by European visitors to have attained a high degree of excellence in his portraits in oil. Indeed, those which the writer has seen reveal a superiority in technique, some of them, too, so closely resembling the work of Chinnery that if it were not for the fact of the artist's seal being attached to them, they would readily be mistaken for those of his master.

MODERN Chinese artists have ceaselessly striven to enter the seventh heaven of the ultimate in pictographic delineation as portrayed by the great masters of the past. Some of them have been peculiarly successful, and it may be said that many of their works in water-colour are comparable with the masterpieces of the great painters of previous epochs. One of those whose pictures are liable to impress posterity with their excellence is Ko K'ei-fung. This gentleman at the time of his passing in 1935 at the comparatively early age of fifty years had achieved by the excellence of his work an enviable reputation which extended throughout the Far East.

Some of his pupils have, like their master, obtained the commendation of Chinese virtuosi for the studied excellence and high standard of their productions. Amongst the most talented of these who have enjoyed the privilege of study under the guidance of such a famous master are that talented trio of Hongkong artists—Hsiung Pi-shang, Yao-shang and Pei-shang. These young ladies—the eldest of whom is but 24 years of age—have studied Chinese painting for more than ten years and

Have a heart-to-heart talk with yourself! Double exposure, accurately planned, will let you.

Do you remember the wondrous tales you read when a child, the forbidden castles filled with ogres, the huge jinn of the Arabian Nights, the trolls that lived under bridges and the fairies that haunted mysterious woodlands?

You can use your camera to recreate those childhood memories. You can make giants walk through your pictures. You can hold yourself, or a tiny version of yourself, in the hollow of your own hand. You can pose in intimate conversation with the Irish "wee people," the elves and fairies and the cobbler, leprechaun.

It's not hard. The method is to use our old friend, the double exposure—two shots on the same film. All that is necessary is accurate posing and careful control of the light. A black background is necessary or you can pose your subject before the door of a dark room.

Note the picture above. Although it was made with a camera having a ground glass for focusing, which simplifies making such pictures, you can get the same effect with your own small camera. First, pose the subject fairly close to the camera, with his empty hand extended. Snap the picture and mark the position of the hand on the glass viewfinder, very carefully, with a tiny dot of ink.

Now, without winding the film, move the camera back several feet, so the subject appears small in the viewfinder. Let him stand, facing his former position, so that his feet appear right on the ink dot in the finder. Arrange the light so the feet are not too brightly illuminated. This will help eliminate evidence of slight errors in the position of the subject. Snap the shutter a second time and the final picture is made. When the picture is developed, presto!—there are the little man and the big one, facing each other on the same film.

You will probably make mistakes in placement on your first tries, because the viewfinder is small, but this is part of the fun of trying trick photography—and some of your errors may give a funnier picture than the one you carefully planned. It is well to remember that only the figures in these shots can be lighted—if surrounding objects show up, they will spoil the picture.

If your camera has an "open" direct view finder, without glass, it is best not to try this sort of work. If, however, you have a camera with ground glass back, you can place figures with greater accuracy.

With this technique, you can make a fairy dance on the table in front of you—the fairy being your small daughter in her ballet dress. If you want to make the little figures transparent, shorten exposure a little. You can, if you like, do costume work, illustrating the fairy tales you enjoyed as a child. Try Jack and the Beanstalk, with an intrepid small boy eluding the grasp of a fierce ogre. Or get an old hicking brogan and a copy of Mother Goose and picture the Old Lady Who Lived in a Shoe.

NO FURTHER NOTE CONTEMPLATED

But Hull Stands Firmly On His Original Demands

Washington, Dec. 23.

It is not believed that a fresh note on the Panay incident will be despatched to Japan, but such new information as emerges will be forwarded to Mr. Joseph C. Grew, the United States Ambassador, for use in presenting additional facts to the Japanese Government as an addendum to the original protest.

The United States Government stands firmly on the basis of its original demands.

Mr. Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, informed pressmen to-day that the official report of the United States Naval Board's enquiry into the Panay incident had been received, but it raised no new major controversial points.

Mr. Hull added that the Japanese Government had indicated it was giving the incident daily attention, but there was still no definite information when the reply might be expected.

Mr. Hull stated that he had not discussed with President Roosevelt or the Naval Department the advisability of advancing to February the annual Pacific manoeuvres which were now scheduled for March 14.

REPORTS TO BE PUBLISHED

Washington, Dec. 23. Mr. Cordell Hull announced to-day that he had received complete reports of the Panay affair on the basis of which it was decided to make additional representations to Japan through Mr. J. C. Grew, the United States Ambassador, as the nature of the evidence supported previous demands.

Included are the reports of Captain Hughes, Mr. Atcheson of the United States Embassy, and the findings of the Naval Court of Inquiry, all of which will be published very shortly. Senator Borah in an interview, warned against the psychology of war, but said: "We have a right, and it is our duty, to protect American and legitimate United States interests in China."

He did not think America should get out of China or leave the East, neither did he think that if they failed to do so they would go to war with Japan. —United Press.

Every tree that bringeth forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire.

Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them.

NOT every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven.

Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name done many wonderful works?

And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity.

THEREFORE whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock;

And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock.

And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand.

And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell: and great was the fall of it.

MOST GOLFERS CHEAT!

By
F. J. C. PIGNON

LAW, rules, instructions, decisions; these, it seems, are becoming the most important things in sport today.

So much so that players can be excused for saying to themselves "How far can I go without actually cheating?" and even the most punctilious will take advantage of any rule which permits him to escape punishment for his own mistakes.

If that same player were to be accused of cheating he would be most offended, yet the complication of rules makes unwilling cheats of us all.

You may think you know the rules, but how can you when even those who make them scarcely know how to define them clearly?

WITHOUT doubt, the most complicated rules in all sport are those governing golf. I am convinced that not one golfer in a hundred really knows the rules of golf. How can he when there is the following formidable list?

Twenty-three definitions.
Thirty-five rules for match play (some with many sub-sections).
Sixteen rules for stroke play.
Special rules for stroke play four-somes, bogey competitions, beat ball and four-ball matches, as well as Local rules, a barrage of restrictions called the "Etiquette of golf," and definitions of what is legal and illegal in the form and make of clubs and balls.

These, although covered in about twelve thousand words are apparently inadequate, since the Rules of Golf Committee has found it necessary to publish two ample volumes of

"Decisions" on the rules to elucidate complications which still arise.

Yet it was all very simple when there were only thirteen rules of golf—the original code—embraced in 300 words.

To-day, in almost every golf tournament there arises some question about the rules to be settled.

Take the cases of two professionals of high esteem who were disqualified after returning winning scores in tournaments only this week. There is no suggestion that they cheated, but they simply did not know enough about the rules.

These are the facts in brief. The ball was "lost," and while the caddies were searching for it the competitor returned to the place from where the ball was struck to play another shot so as to save time.

In the meantime the first ball was found, and the player therefore continued to hole out with it. That may seem reasonable enough, since a player is permitted to play a provisional ball when the first is likely to be lost; but the provisional ball must be played before the competitor goes forward to seek the first.

Moreover, the "Definitions" and not the Rules state that if a "lost" ball is subsequently found it may not be played. So, according to this confusing code, a ball that is found remains lost.

TECHNICALLY, the ball is "lost" or "abandoned" immediately the player goes back to play another, even though he has not expended the five minutes he is allowed for searching for the ball.

And here's another puzzle! How ridiculous it seems that there should be a rule of golf that disqualifies a player for holing out with his own ball, yet such rule exists. And there are even worse examples of what seems to be grave injustice.

What would you think, for instance, if, having holed out in one, you were compelled by the rules to mark down a five on your card?

This actually happened during a competition at Reigate Heath. A player holed out in one at a short hole at which he could not see where the ball finished.

On coming to the green the ball could not be found so the competitor went back to play another from the tee, adding the penalty for lost ball and eventually holing out in five.

It was not until he holed the second ball, however, that the first was discovered in the hole.

What was to be done? The club committee was uncertain, so referred the matter to the Rules of Golf Committee, who decided that the player holed out in five and not in one, because the first ball was "lost!"

WHAT obstructions is it possible to move? Is it possible to move the ball from certain bad lies? May the club be grounded...? These and a hundred and one other questions are raised by players, not with any endeavour to cheat but so as to gain full advantage of the rules.

There are about 1,000,000 golfers in Britain. All of them wish to play honestly and fairly, but not one-tenth of them can fully understand the present code.

For their peace of mind, let the Rules of Golf Committee, which is being reconstituted, give a lead in the sporting world by simplifying the rules.

The Story Behind China's Heroism

It is always rash to prophesy; but for once I will take the risk. This is the most exciting, rare, timely and important book published this year; and it will probably remain so for a long time to come.

Edgar Snow has done what no other living man has ever done; he has raised the curtain on one of the last great mysteries of the modern world; and has answered every question that the inquiring mind had ever wanted to know about it.

And a great many more as well.

Here, in three dimensions, is Soviet China; here for the first time are its leaders, in particular Mao Tse-tung, its Stalin; here is the way of its peoples' life, their enthusiasms, their fortitude, their integrity and, above all, their bravery.

It is an epic story. Five times Chiang Kai-shek hurled his Prussian trained armies against the Reds, five times he announced their annihilation to the world; five times he lied.

All the might of Nanking, blessed by the Great Powers of the world, never smashed an army that began with 200 captured rifles, grew to 100,000 trained men; was decimated; marched over 3,000 miles to preserve its independence; was hailed as deliverer wherever it went; and had an average individual age of about 20.

Few of the epic marches of history can compare with that migration of a whole people from Kiangsi, in the south, by way of Kweichow, and Yunnan to Shensi, in the north, where the Red capital now is.

It is a tale of perpetual wonder. Its high light was the crossing of the River Tatu in the face of enemy machine-guns. Picture it. Swung above a gorge, 100 yards wide, with the river crashing over rocks far below, is a chain bridge built centuries ago. Its floor boarding had been destroyed; only chains remained, across which, if they would reach the other side men had to swing like monkeys.

They had to cross; upon the success of that manoeuvre depended perhaps the fate of Soviet China. So men, in the face of those machine-guns, swung out over the river. Many of the first volunteers never got across, but dropped, one by one, into the river. In the end, however, intrepidity won; the enemy picked up its skirts and ran.

That episode is a symbol of the incredible difficulties which Soviet China has had to face—and conquer. It has conquered; it has changed the history of China and perhaps, of the human race.

But what, above all, shines from this book is a bravery that may have been matched in this world, but has certainly never been exceeded.

PHILIP JORDAN.

Moscow. More than 50 bars near Moscow's university buildings and secondary schools have been closed by a decree which is aimed at stopping drinking by young people.

The sale of alcohol has been prohibited in a factory dining-rooms and on factory premises. It has also been banned in 34 foodshops, 29 restaurants and cafes—mostly along the main streets—and in 19 market tea-rooms for peasants.

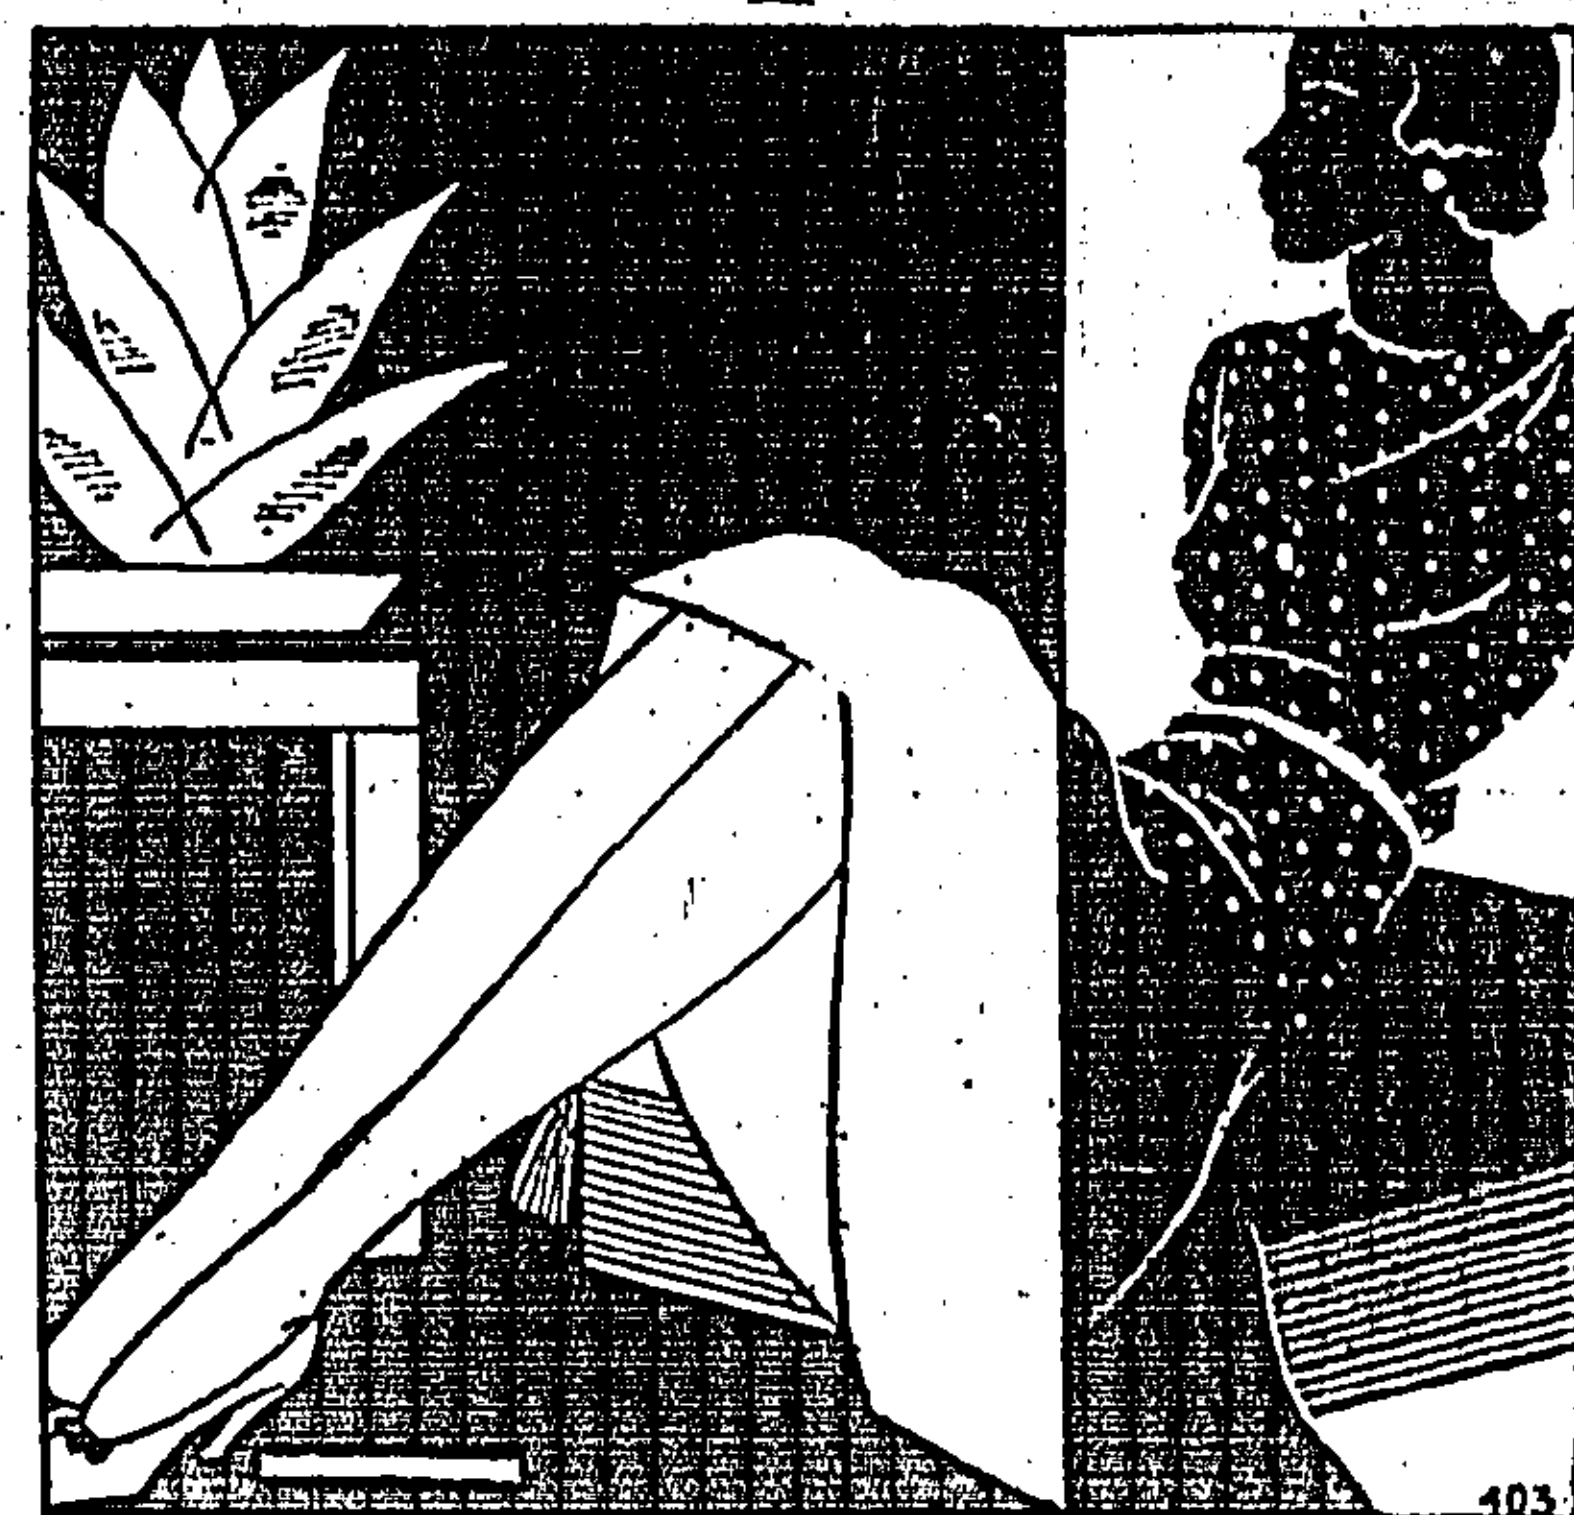

Vodka and other alcoholic drinks are to be sold in future only by the bottle and not by the glass. Leningrad gave Moscow the lead in these measures against the growing drunkenness and rowdiness.

2,700 MILES CYCLE RIDE

Sydney. The Australian road cyclist, Hubert Opperman, who has established many records in Britain and France, is expected here from Fremantle, Western Australia, on Thursday. To-night he reached Melbourne.

Opperman has already covered 2,180 miles in 11 days, 6 hours, 55 minutes, and is nearly four days ahead of the existing record held by W. Reed, of Perth. The total distance he will cover is approximately 2,700 miles.

NAVY V. ARMY

The first of the games at the Triangular Tournament this year was begun on Wednesday between the Navy and Army teams. It is the only one of the series, owing to the awkward date of Christmas which can last more than two days. As a matter of fact, early in the morning it did not look at all as if there was going to be any play, but about 11.20 a.m. a start was made although the weather was miserable. Neither did it improve very much in the afternoon. At one period it looked as if the Army were going to put up a pretty big score as after the first wicket fell, Weeden and McGowan seemed to have settled down pretty comfortably. Neither Cotman nor Paxton found the rather soft wicket any good to them while Kyrke after his one wicket had no further success. He sent down some excellent balls occasionally, but he is apparently very uncertain in his direction. The necessity of keeping a short-leg, a fine-leg and a long-leg in addition to mid-on on the leg side to look after leg balls caused him to bowl with only one slip and a gully. I imagine that after a spell of nets he will be able to dispense with at least two of these leg-men and if he bowls at or just outside the off stump with a gully and three slips he ought to be pretty useful on a hard wicket.

A COMPLETE CHANGE

When, however, Boucher (who was in charge during Whitmarsh's absence on duty) put Carless on at the Gas Works end while he himself went on at the other, a complete change speedily came over the scene. A slight change of pace caused McGowan to return the ball to Boucher and the stand was broken up. Mackintosh-Walker laid about him stoutly but you cannot hit across them all the time and Carless dropped a full toss on his middle stump. It was the beginning of the end. Weeden got to 37 before he put one up off Boucher—a very good catch by Ogilvie in the deep, but then the hutch was open and the side was out for 116 runs.

STOUT NAVY BATTING

The Navy were a far more balanced side and their first six batsmen all scored double figures. Later Kyrke had a merry twenty-two which included a six on to the Commodore's office. Ninety-two runs in arrears the Army on a brilliantly fine day yesterday could not manage 124—5 runs better than their first innings. Weeden again got runs but on the whole the batting of the side was terribly weak. Boucher, Kyrke, Cotman and Paxton all got wickets. Left with only 33 to get, the Navy made a sensational start as Walters was caught at cover from Barror's first ball. Barror continued to bowl excellently—far better than I have seen him bowl before—but runs came steadily and Smith and Cotman had no difficulty in knocking off the required amount. Thus the Navy were deservedly winners by nine wickets in a match which was chiefly notable for poor bowling with one or two exceptions.

MONDAY'S GAMES

In spite of the cards, the game between the Club and the Army in the Triangular Tournament is only being played on Monday, 27th December. In the days when I was young and played cricket vigorously (Con-sule Planco) we used to have a magnificent Christmas tiffin and play from "threeply" on. And it was some cricket, believe me! But in those days ninety per cent. of the teams were bachelors or grass-widowers. It is, one recognises, quite impossible now. The Navy also visit Kowloon for an all day match and I only wish I could be present at both of them.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS

In conclusion I will wish my readers a Merry Christmas, and a happy and peaceful New Year. May we all be batting on a good wicket in 1938!

CORRESPONDENCE Challenged Accepted

To the Editor,
Hongkong Telegraph:
Sir,—On behalf of the Y.M.C.A. Hockey Section, I have much pleasure in accepting the challenge made by C. B. A. through the medium of your paper. Official stuff ends.

I feel that in the interests of science, fair play, common humanity and the R.S.P.C.A., umpires of undisputed capability, integrity and sobriety should officiate, so have taken the liberty of asking Man Friday and Cannibal King to control the brawl. I may add that this was only accomplished after long discussion, and a great deal of persuasion, through, of course, the usual channels, as both the gentlemen had doubts as to their ability to see "one place ball one looksee" after the Xmas festivities. They have also made two stipulations:

(1) That they be met at the ground with honours befitting their respective ranks.

(2) That no softball tactics be employed, i.e. clubbing the umpire. Should all the above be in order, we should welcome an informal discussion with "C. B. A. Official" before "Der Tag," so that we may discuss just what isn't cricket, or for that matter, what is.

Thanking you for allowing us to use your paper instead of the more costly diplomatic channels.
Y.M.C.A. OFFICIAL.

How Doctors Treat Stomach Trouble

By Dr. S. Jott, M.D., Paris.

Although doctors are human, you rarely find them suffering from indigestion. The reason is that they know exactly what causes it and how to treat it. Personally, I know nothing to equal "Disurated" Magnesia as a speedy and lasting remedy for all digestive troubles. If I eat anything that disagrees with me I take either a teaspoonful of the powder, or four of the tablets, and there is an end of the trouble. Indeed, there is something almost miraculous about the speed with which "Disurated" Magnesia arrests acute stomach pain. "Disurated" Magnesia (powder or tablets) can be obtained from all Chemists and Stores. I advise every sufferer to take some after their next meal, the relief will be a revelation.

operating with troops and aircraft—Heuter.

FULL STATEMENT

London, Dec. 23.
The House of Commons adjourned this afternoon for Christmas and will reassemble on February 1. The subject of foreign propaganda, and in particular Italian anti-British propaganda was raised in debate on the adjournment, and replying for the Government, Lord Cranborne said the general question of British news services was at the present moment under examination by a special committee appointed by the Cabinet. It can assure the House—there is direct evidence of it—that we take this question very seriously indeed, and recognise its immense importance, but pending examination of it by the committee, I think the House will forgive me if I do not make any further statement.

Coming to Italian propaganda he referred to previous occasions on which the Government had made its attitude sufficiently clear. He thought there was no disagreement in any quarters of the House regarding this propaganda. They all hated organized propaganda from whatever country it came, whether it was Government-inspired, Government-controlled, or merely Government encouraged. They believed it represented one of the worst developments of the modern world.

DEGREES OF BADNESS

Of course there were gradations of badness. There was propaganda in which a country boasted of itself. There was the form of propaganda, which was far more pernicious, in which a country tried, quite deliberately, or apparently deliberately, to detract from, or to depreciate its neighbours. It seemed to him that that form of propaganda was bad from every point of view—from the point of view of the country that did it because the people of that country, if propaganda was conducted through the public press got a completely distorted idea of the world situation and that was dangerous position for any people. It was bad also from the point of view of the peoples of other countries if it was conducted over the radio because they also got a distorted impression, though to a lesser degree it was true, for they were able by other means to get a truer impression.

But, the worst effect was on the relations between the country which attacked and the country which was attacked. Nothing could be so embittering to relations as a constant stream of irritating propaganda material. He believed it must take a large share of the blame for the situation existing in the world to-day.

They in England had had considerable experience in recent years of propaganda of this description. From time to time there have been clear evidence from the Italian press and from abroad—the Near East and other parts of the world—of propaganda directed entirely against Great Britain. The British Government had never condoned that propaganda. It had always taken a very serious view of it. On former occasions when it had become bad it had always made strong representations which had led to improvement—temporary not permanent improvement, but still improvement. But there has been during recent months—recrudescence—and it was for that reason the Foreign Secretary had sent for the Italian ambassador and told him the Government was well aware of that propaganda and added that unless it could be brought to an end it would be impossible to create an atmosphere necessary for the prosecution of successful conversations designed to improve Anglo-Italian relations.

WARNING HINT

On former occasions such representations had to a certain extent been effective. It was their hope and belief the good sense of the Italian people would see to it they were effective again. If they were not effective it was clear sooner or later they must take further measures and he must assure the House that they would not hesitate to take whatever measures they thought necessary or appropriate for the purpose. They did not want to have to take measures with any other countries. What they really wanted was a return to the old confident friendship which had existed in the past with Italy, but

Tokyo Cabinet Considering Grave Matter

Tokyo, Dec. 24.

The Cabinet to-day will consider a "certain important diplomatic measure" the nature of which is not divulged. The measure will later be presented formally to the Privy Council for approval before the year's end.

It is rumoured that this measure may be one of two things: the announcement of Manchukuo's accession to the Anti-Comintern Pact or a demand for the revision of the Nine Power Pact.—Heuter.

HOSPITAL EMPLOYEE CONVICTED

Hard Labour Sentence For Stealing

A store cooler employed at the Royal Naval Hospital appeared before Mr. R. A. D. Forrest at the Central Magistrate's court this morning on two charges of stealing medical supplies from the hospital. He was accused of stealing six lbs. of olive oil, 12 yards of gauze, and quantities of borax, wax and Mequerochrome, on December 22, and two empty bottles and a pair of scissors on December 20.

It was stated that he had been searched coming off a tram outside Sincere's, with the subjects of the first charge in his possession. Questioned, he admitted the theft and said he had disposed of the bottles and scissors to a native doctor. This doctor could not be found.

Sentences of four weeks hard labour, consecutive, were passed on each charge.

WARMER WEATHER

Slightly warmer weather is being experienced to-day, the temperature recorded by the Royal Observatory at 10 o'clock this morning being 71 degrees as against the maximum of 68 yesterday.

The weather report reads: The anti-cyclone has passed into the Pacific to the east of Japan, and another of considerable intensity has developed over North China and Manchuria. The depression of the Yangtze Valley has moved into the eastern sea to the south of Korea. Forecast—East and North-east winds, moderate to fresh; fine to cloudy.

DENY FALL OF TERUEL

Insurgents Rushing Relief Column

Salamanca, Dec. 23.
Insurgents to-day denied the capture of Teruel by Government troops, and stated that the garrison there is holding out with great bravery, and that reinforcements are being rushed to its relief.—Heuter.

that confident friendship required mutual respect and understanding.

Lord Cranborne concluded that if the debate served to show that all types of opinion, not only in the House but in the country viewed the matter with concern; that the whole people of the British Isles were concerned about it from the very sincere desire that such a condition would tend to lead to the restoration of Britain's old relations with Italy, he believed the debate would have served a very useful purpose.—British Wireless.

Chinese Advancing In South Hopei

Hsuehchow, Dec. 24.

Following the capture of Tamingku, 120 miles south of Shihchichwang, in southern Hopei province, the Chinese forces are advancing rapidly on to Kwangping and Chengan, according to a military despatch received here.—Central News.

Counter-Offensive Launched

Hsuehchow, Dec. 24.

A counter-offensive is being launched by the Chinese forces at Chushien on the Tientsin-Pukow Railway about 60 kilometres north of Pukow, according to a foreign missionary who just arrived from Chushien.

There is no trace of Japanese troops immediately north of Pukow, he said.

Chinese youths in north Kiangsu, he revealed, are organising themselves into volunteer corps to harass the Japanese troops and defend their native land.—Central News.

Japanese Warships Sighted

Anking, Dec. 24.

According to a telephone message from Holsien, several Japanese warships have been sighted steering up the Yangtze River. While passing Holsien in the afternoon of December 21, two of them machine-gunned the Chinese on the bank.

Large batches of Japanese troops are withdrawing from Wuhu to Kwangteh on the Anhwei-Chienkung border presumably to reinforce their units now fighting around Hangchow.—Central News.
